COMPILER'S PREFACE

THE object of this small book is to give a clear conception of the theory as well as the practice of spiritual life, to seekers both in the East and the West. The selections included in it are only representative of their type; they are by no means exhaustive. Most of them have been taken from the Upanishads and the Bhagavad Gita, but the chapters on Ethical Culture and Monistic Meditations contain passages from other sources as well.

The paramount need of ethical culture has been stressed by means of selections from different Sanskrit scriptures; for true divine life always means 'ethics in the beginning, ethics in the middle, and ethics in the end'. Monistic meditations are not easily available to those who would like to have them for their constant use. In order to remove this want, a fairly representative collection of those has been given here.

The quotations, arranged as they are under different heads, deal with the fundamental problems of spiritual life. Transcending the narrow bounds of creeds, religions and countries, they set forth in the language of the soul, the ways and means of spiritual evolution and unfoldment that are of universal application. Universally true as they are in spirit, may they prove helpful to many a sincere seeker after Truth !

The Introduction will, it is trusted, bring home to the intelligent reader, the necessity of taking a synthetic standpoint in the study of spiritual life.

The idea of this collection existed in the mind of the compiler even in India. But it could take shape only in the course of his Vedanta work, first at Wiesbaden in Germany, and later on, at St. Moritz in the charming valley of the Engadin lying in the heart of the Alps in Switzerland.

The compiler wishes to express his sincere thanks to all those from whom he has received help in some form or other, particularly to Mr. W. H. Koch and Mrs. M. Könz who typed the manuscripts with great care and devotion.

INTRODUCTION

SPIRITUAL AWAKENING

THE phenomenon of spiritual awakening is witnessed in all the great religions of the world. (In the course of man's higher evolution, there arises in him a new yearning, which may properly be called the hunger of the soul.) Because of this new urge, the aspirant is not satisfied with the finite and fleeting pleasures of life, physical and mental, but longs for the Eternal and the Infinite, which alone can bring nourishment and peace to his hungry soul. We notice this fact in some form or other in the Hindu Seer, in the Buddhist Initiate, in the Christian Mystic as well as in the Muslim Sufi. All of them lose the charm for material pleasures and even intellectual enjoyments, and with their entire being hanker after perfection and freedom, although the paths of spiritual discipline they follow may be different in many respects.

Whether the first spiritual change or 'conversion', as it is called, is brought about all of a sudden, or by a slow process going on in the soul of the aspirant, unknown and unnoticed, there comes to him always a new outlook, which was very characteristically expressed in terms of theism by a great Indian devotee of ancient days, "Lord, may I think of Thee with that strong love which the ignorant cherish for the things of the world, and may that love never cease to abide in my heart."

In studying the psychology of the spiritual seeker, we find in him not only a new attitude towards the world but also a new outlook on his own self. The worldly-minded identify themselves with the body and care only for the enjoyments of the world. The spiritual aspirant, on the other hand, comes to regard himself as a soul—a spiritual entity dwelling in the body but different from it—whatever his conception of it may be at the beginning, and he earnestly wants to come in touch with the Oversoul or the divine Principle, the God of the devotee, who, as Sri Ramakrishna realised, is only one but is attainable through many paths of spiritual culture.

THE CONSCIOUSNESS OF THE ETERNAL SELF

The belief in the indestructible and eternal nature of the Self is a most vital point in spiritual life and practice. Empirical sciences, busy with the material aspects of things, are not sufficient to explain life as such. The living body is, no doubt, a combination of cells as biology tells us; but the principle of life that animates it is something different from the dead matter through which it manifests itself. As Sir Oliver Lodge has expressed very clearly, "The behaviour of a ship firing shot and shell is explicable in terms of energy ; but the discrimination which it exercises between friend and foe is not so explicable. The vagaries of a fire or a cyclone could be predicted by Laplace's calculator, given the initial positions, velocities and the law of acceleration of the molecules, but no mathematician could calculate the orbit of a common house-fly. Life introduces something incalculable and purposeful amid the laws of physics ; thus it distinctly supplements those laws, though it leaves them otherwise precisely as they were and obeys them all."

There are biologists who go so far as to declare that the brain secretes thought just as the liver secretes bile. Thus, according to them, mind is a product of matter. But it should not be forgotten that the conception of matter is undergoing a revolutionary change in the thoughts of some of the first class men of science today. As the distinguished physicist and astronomer, Sir

James Jeans, clearly acknowledges, "The universe begins to look more like a great thought than a great machine. . . . Mind no longer appears as an accidental intruder in the realm of matter. We are beginning to suspect that we ought rather to hail it as the creator and governor of the realm of matter. Not, of course, our individual minds, but the Mind in which the atoms, out of which our individual minds have grown, exist as thoughts."

To the materially-minded, the body and the world of matter are realities of the first order. And whatever is taken to be real for the time being, draws out the whole soul of man—his thoughts, his feelings as well as his will. But when the new factor of spiritual consciousness begins to exert its influence upon the seeker after Truth, he comes to doubt the ultimate reality of his body and the world of matter and mind, nay, he instinctively comes to regard his Self and the Divine to be more real than the former. Consequently he begins to react in altogether a new way, and his entire life and thought undergo a transformation.

This is pointed out in the Bhagavad Gita : “The Self is never born, nor does It die. It is not that not having been, It comes into being. It is unborn, eternal, changeless, ever Itself. It is not killed when the body is killed” (II, 20). So the man of Self-realisation gets rid of the fear of death ; for having attained to the knowledge of the true Self, he has become immortal. Even the sincere believer in the eternal nature of the Self should be free from fear. So the Bhagavad Gita says again : “This, the Indweller in the bodies of all, is ever indestructible. Therefore thou oughtest not to mourn for any creature” (II, 30). The same book further says that the aspirant who is steady in the ideal and in the path leading to its realisation should perform his duty, giving up attachment and remaining indifferent to success or failure (II, 48).

Taking refuge in the Lord who dwells in his heart, he should follow the divine path and approach the ideal more and more.

What is the Self? What again is God? To the theist, God is the indwelling Spirit, the Self of his self. To the monist, God is his true Self itself, as distinct from the false self which he takes to be real before the dawn of the highest spiritual knowledge. In trying to realise his real nature, he finds that what he has been calling his own self is only a shadow of Reality, that his so-called personality is but a reflection of the eternal Principle. He gains perfection in his ideal when he becomes one with It. Speaking on this point, Sri Ramakrishna observes: "Know yourself and you shall then know God. What is my ego? Is it my hand or foot or flesh or blood or any other part of my body? Reflect well, and you will know that there is no such thing as 'I'. The more you peel an onion, the more you find it to be all skin; you cannot get any kernel at all. So when you analyse the ego, it vanishes into nothingness. What is ultimately left behind is the Atman (Self)—the pure Chit (absolute Consciousness). God appears when the ego dies.”

GOD, SOUL AND THE UNIVERSE

The three topics—the soul, God and the universe—are the most fundamental in all religions and philosophies. The intelligent spiritual aspirant wants to form a clear conception not only of his own soul but also of the relation of God to the soul on the one hand, and of God and soul to the universe on the other. He wants to find the right solution for the enigma of life. So it was but natural that in ancient India the seekers after Truth, perplexed by the mysteries of existence, asked the questions: “What is the cause of the universe? Whence are we born? Why do we live? Where is our final rest? Under whose command are we subject to happiness and misery ? ” (Svetasvatara Upanishad, 1, 1). They pondered deeply over the riddle of the universe and tried to find explanations about it with the help of the intellect and reason. They took up for consideration the various entities—time, 'chance, matter, energy and so on—that might prove to be the ultimate cause of things, but finally rejected them all as unsatisfactory. They realised that the final explanation cannot be had on the plane of the intellect. So with a view to arrive at true knowledge by means of intuition or direct experience, they dived deep into the inner regions of their mind, and through the process of meditation realised that everything has its origin in an eternal self-conscious Power, called God or Self in religion and philosophy.

This idea is graphically expressed in another Upanishad, the Mundaka, which runs: “As the spider produces the thread and absorbs it into itself again, as herbs grow on the earth, as hairs come out spontaneously from man, so does creation spring forth from the Imperishable" (I, 1, 7).

The worlds of both the living and the non-living have their origin in the one great Cause. "As from a blazing fire there shoot out thousands of sparks of the same appearance, so do the various beings originate from the Imperishable, and into It they go back. From the Imperishable are also born vital energy, the mind, the senses, ether, air, fire, water and the earth" (Mundaka Up. I, 3, 1).

It may be that some schools of Hindu thought regard the individual self as atomic in its true nature while others conceive it as infinite, but all hold that it represents a pure, conscious and spiritual existence different from mind, senses and body, which form its instruments of knowledge and action. Again, the Hindu thinkers do not consider the Self or Atman to be really a created being. According to some, it is eternally existent as an atomic consciousness; according to others it is finite only in the state of ignorance, whereas in reality it is infinite Consciousness itself. The texts that speak of its origin, according to this latter view, are to be interpreted only as implying its expression or manifestation in the world of mind and matter. This Self dwells equally in men as well as in other beings; the only difference is that animals and other creatures are in a lower stage of growth. All will manifest their potential Divinity and attain perfection in course of time.

THE ETERNAL LAW OF KARMA OR CAUSATION

The laws of Karma and reincarnation are inseparably connected with the soul's state of bondage when it is associated with mind and matter. The term 'Karma' means both work and its result, manifest or unmanifest. The doctrine has nothing to do with fatalism or inactivity. Rightly understood, it means that each act done must bear its fruit, good or bad, according to its nature. Karma has its objective result and also its reaction on the mind of the doer. Believing in this cosmic law, the Hindu holds that his present state is the result of his past actions, physical and mental, and that his future is going to be moulded by his present strivings. As such, the law of Karma is the greatest incentive to self-effort. It does not make man subject to the fiat of a whimsical God, but urges him to be the architect of his own fate and invests him with the full responsibility for his actions. It asks him to reconcile himself to his present lot, without unnecessarily worrying himself with affairs over which his control is limited or nil. It inspires him at the same time to put forth fresh efforts for improving his future as much as possible. Whatever might be the mistaken notions about it among those who take shelter in a doctrine of parasitic salvation, avoiding moral and spiritual struggles, Karma in its true import includes both destiny and self-effort, and of these the latter is the more important factor in life. Says one of the Hindu scriptures: " Know that destiny is the result of one's own action acquired in another bodily existence. Hence the wise man calls one's effort superior. So even adverse destiny is vanquished by the heroic efforts of people exerting themselves in auspicious actions " (Matsya Purana).

THE DOCTRINE OF REBIRTH

The doctrine of rebirth is based directly on the law of Karma. It presupposes the belief in the imperishable Self or Atman and in the potential Divinity of man, nay, of all beings, and also in the law of evolution through which the soul has to pass in its march towards perfection. The Hindu teachers do not believe in the creation of a new soul along with the body. They believe, on the other hand, not only in the soul's future life but also in its pre-existence.

According to them, the habits and tendencies with which the soul is born, are due to its actions in previous lives. And until the dawn of the highest knowledge, which puts an end to ignorance—the root-cause of man's attachment to his body and false personality as well as to the world of senses and enjoyment—the soul undergoes repeated births in order to gain fresh experience and grows wise through them. In the words of the Bhagavad Gita, " Even as a man casts off worn out clothes and puts on others that are new, so does the embodied being cast off worn out bodies and enter into others that are new " (II, 22). Neither the doctrine of a single birth, nor the theory of hereditary transmission, can satisfactorily explain the life of the soul with its inborn temperament and idiosyncrasies. ✓ Every embodied being has a twofold ancestry, material and spiritual. He gets his physical body from his parents; but as a soul distinct from the body, he is in a sense his own ancestor, although from a larger point of view he derives his being from God and therefore 'cometh from afar'. He is born with ideas which are 'more ancient than this corporeal birth'. "Some are born happy," says Swami Vivekananda, "enjoy perfect health, with beautiful body, mental vigour and all wants supplied. Others are born miserable, some are without hands or feet, others again are idiots, and only drag on a wretched existence. . . . Why should a man be miserable even here in the reign of a just and merciful God. . . . There must have been causes, then, before his birth, to make a man miserable or happy, and those were his past actions . . . All our knowledge, whether we call it perception, or reason, or instinct, must come through that one channel called experience, and all that we now call instinct is the result of past experience degenerated into instinct, and that instinct regenerates into reason again. So on through-out the universe, and upon this has been built one of the chief arguments for reincarnation, in India. The recurring experiences of various fears, in course of time, produce this clinging to life. That is why the child is instinctively afraid, because the past experience of fear is there in it."

Is the soul eternally bound by the trammels of Karma and re-birth? Is there no possible escape from them at any time? There is, replies the Hindu scriptures. Regulated self-effort, including ethical culture, performance of duty, worship, prayer and meditation, prepare man for the highest knowledge and devotion. These reveal to him his true nature as well as that of the divine Reality. To quote the words of the Upanishads on this point, "The knots of the heart are broken, all doubts are cut asunder, and Karma and its effects cease to exist when the Self is realised" (Mundaka, II, 2, 9). Sri Krishna puts the same idea in a different language when He declares in the Bhagavad Gita: "Reaching the highest perfection and having attained Me—the Divine—the great-souled ones are no more subject to re-birth, painful and ephemeral. All the world is subject to return, but after attaining Me, there is no re-birth” (VIII, 15, 16). Thus in the Hindu conception of life and salvation there is scope for both personal striving and divine grace. Although the doctrine of re-birth forms an important part of the Hindu religious teaching, it has to be remembered that the ideal set before the aspirant is to strive his best for the attainment of the highest goal even in this very life.

Observes Swami Vivekananda : “ Religion is not in books, nor in theories, nor in dogmas, nor in talking, not even in reasoning. It is being and becoming . . . Man must realise God, feel God, talk to God. That is religion. There is such a thing as realisation even in this life, and it is open to everyone, and religion begins with the opening of this faculty, if I may call it so.”

GOD AND THE WORLD

According to Vedanta, the highest expression of spiritual knowledge in Hindu culture, there are three points of view from which God's relationship with the world can be discussed. In dualism God is personal and extra-cosmic, and the universe, like a machine or a pot, made out of self-existent materials called atoms. This may be called the theory of atomic agglomeration. In what is known as qualified non-dualism, God is personal-impersonal and immanent in Nature. Here, therefore, the universe is looked upon as an Organism. It is real and passes through gross and subtle states in a cyclic order. This is the theory of evolution and involution. In the third point of view known as non-dualism or monism, the Divine who is really impersonal and transcendent appears as the universe through the power of Maya or delusive and creative ignorance, which, with its limitations of time, space and causation, forms, as it were, the matrix of matter and mind. This appearance is taken to be real, as long as the soul is in ignorance, but it is realised to be unreal with the dawn of true knowledge, which reveals the nature of Reality.

None of these theories advocates the idea of creation out of nothing. In the first two, the cause of gross matter is subtle matter, and destruction is not annihilation but only going back to the cause. Through ignorance men take the world to be a reality of the first order. With the dawn of higher knowledge, the world is found to be a reality of a lesser order, dependent on the Divine who alone is reality of the first order. According to the monist, Brahman or Reality appears as the universe. So even here there is no question of creation out of nothing, as the substratum is always present even when it is not recognised. The Power that is the cause of this appearance, and the appearance itself, are not illusions but empirical realities to the ordinary man. They do not, however, possess absolute reality, as they disappear when the highest spiritual consciousness is attained at the dawn of supreme knowledge.

So Maya, as Swami Vivekananda puts it, is not illusion but a statement of fact. Its nature is beyond human comprehension. Why and how does it produce a world so full of contradictions—of good and evil, happiness and misery, life and death? And why and how again does it melt away with all its manifestations at the dawn of true knowledge? None has been able to answer these questions and solve the mystery. But to the illumined soul there comes a time when this contradictory phenomenon of the world ceases to be, when even the question of its existence or non-existence does not arise at all. As Sankaracharya observes: “Maya is neither absolutely existent nor non-existent, nor does it partake of both characters . . . She is most wonderful, and her nature cannot be defined. She can be destroyed by the realisation of pure Brahman, the one without a second, just as the false perception of a snake for a rope is removed by the discrimination of the rope.”

Thus although we cannot know the nature of this illusive Maya, we can, however, transcend it. And beyond it, says Swami Vivekananda,

There is but One—The Free—the Know-er, Self !

Without a name, without a form or stain.
In Him is Maya, dreaming all this dream.
The Witness, He appears as Nature, soul.

THE IDEAL OF DIVINE REALISATION

In Hinduism religion and philosophy have been inseparable and even almost synonymous. The common aim of both being the intuitive vision of Truth, they fulfil each other. As Prof. Max Muller has very truly observed, the two have worked together harmoniously in India alone, where religion derives its breadth of vision from philosophy, and philosophy its spirituality from religion. Religion is the practical form of philosophy, and philosophy the rational form of religion. In Hinduism, Darsana (literally 'seeing' but usually translated as 'philosophy') means a system calculated to bring about direct vision or experience of Truth. The Hindu philosophers were primarily men of spiritual realisation. And therefore their systems, based as they are on transcendental experience, lead to the same goal, if followed with sincerity and devotion. Thus the goal of both religion and philosophy is Self-realisation, and the aspirant should strive to attain it in this very life.

It is not enough if an aspirant subscribes to doctrines and dogmas with strong faith. He must also strive intensely to live a higher life and gradually attain to divine experience in its various aspects. So corresponding to the dualistic, qualified non-dualistic and non-dualistic systems of thought, there are spiritual experiences in which the devotee realises the divine Being as his master, father, mother, friend, or beloved; or as the eternal Principle of which his personality is the eternal mode or part; or as the one existence-knowledge-bliss Absolute constituting his true Self and goal.

Spiritual life is a continual warfare between the higher and lower natures of man. Animal and divine tendencies are found often mysteriously blended in one and the same individual. And so it must be the constant effort of the aspirant to eliminate the evil and strengthen the good in him. But he must first of all be able to distinguish the divine attributes that lead him towards perfection and freedom, from the demoniac qualities that intensify the soul's ignorance and bondage. The Bhagavad Gita enumerates these divine attributes in detail thus: "Fearlessness, purity of heart, steadfastness in knowledge and spiritual practice, giving away in charity, control of the senses, sacrifice, reading of the scriptures, austerity and uprightness; non-injuriousness, truthfulness, absence of anger, renunciation, tranquillity, absence of calumny, compassion to beings, non-covetousness, gentleness, modesty, absence of fickleness, boldness, forgiveness, fortitude, purity, absence of hatred and absence of pride—these belong to one born for a divine state.

“Ostentation, arrogance and self-conceit, anger as also harshness and ignorance, belong to one who is born for a demoniac state. The divine state is deemed as making for liberation, the demoniac state for bondage” (XVI, 1-5).

THE GUNAS AND HOW TO TRANSCEND THEM

The general classification of men and things into the two groups of good and bad did not satisfy the analytic mind of the Hindu seers. In the course of their examination into the nature of things, they discovered three primordial stuffs (or forces) known as Gunas. These three inseparable constituents of Prakriti or Nature transform themselves into ego, mind, senses, bodies and sense objects. The Gunas manifest themselves both as substance and attributes, even as the primal creative energy expresses itself as both matter and force.

The human personality is a combination of the Self and the non-Self constituting the ego, mind, senses, etc. All that is non-Self belongs to the domain of the Gunas. Knowing the truth that the Self is distinct from the Gunas and their activities, the man of knowledge does not become attached to them but remains free, while the ignorant man with his understanding deluded by egotism thinks that he is the doer and so becomes entangled in the world. This is the teaching of the Bhagavad Gita (Ch. III, 27, 28). But it is not possible for the ordinary soul bound by the Gunās to get detached all on a sudden. In order to transcend the Gunās, one should know their respective natures, attributes and manifestations, and above all, the means to go beyond them.

As has been said, the three Gunās are inseparable, but one or the other of them is always predominant in the embodied being. It is this dominance of a particular Guna that determines the nature of a man. Sattva is associated with purity, knowledge and happiness; Rajas with attachment, activity and pain; Tamas with impurity, ignorance and indolence. The aspirant should overcome Tamas and Rajas by means of Sattva. In order to do this, he should subsist on food that increases Sattva. He should try to acquire knowledge that is conducive to the Sattva mode of life. His worship, gifts, austerities and other forms of activities should be done in such a way as to bring about the Sattva state. As his mind is gradually purified of all its dross, he finds no agent other than the Gunas behind all actions and comes to know the transcendent Principle higher than the Gunas. Freed from birth and death, he attains to the immortal state. Sattva is thus nearer Truth ; but it is not itself Truth. Truth can be realised only by transcending even Sattva. But the question of transcending it will never arise until the seeker has in the first place attained it. Therefore the aspirant should try to develop the Sattva or the spiritual element in him to the best of his power, eliminating all that is impure and unspiritual.

SPIRITUAL LIFE—ITS MEANING

It is clear from the above facts that spiritual life is one of intense striving. In order to attain success, the aspirant should always be up and doing. The Bhagavad Gita exhorts him in these words : “ A man should uplift himself by his own self. Let him not weaken this self. For this self is the friend of oneself, and this self is the enemy of oneself. The self is the friend of the self in the case of him who has conquered himself by this self. But to the unconquered self, the self is inimical and behaves like an eternal foe" (VI, 5, 6).

The life of the seeker after Truth must be dynamic and creative. This does not mean that it is also to be standardised in every respect. Freedom being the first condition of growth, he must be able to follow freely the laws of his being. According to temperament and capacity, he may pursue either the life of selfless activity, or the path of devotion, or the way of sense control and mental concentration, or the path of self-analysis and knowledge, singly or jointly. Swami Vivekananda speaks of the ideal of spiritual life thus in his inimitable language: "Each soul is potentially divine. The goal is to manifest this Divine within, by controlling nature, external and internal. Do this either by work, or worship, or psychic control, or philosophy, by one or more or all of these—and be free. This is the whole of religion. Doctrines, or dogmas, or rituals, or books, or temples, or forms are but secondary details.”

ETHICAL CULTURE INDISPENSABLE

However different may be the approaches leading to the Divine, there can never be any true religious life without a strict moral basis. Ethics is thus a necessary stepping stone to spiritual culture and divine realisation. It is said that the bonds of the devotee are cut asunder through the mercy of the Divine. “This mercy,” says Swami Vivekananda, “comes to the pure. So purity is the condition of His mercy. How that mercy acts! He reveals Himself to the pure heart; and the pure and stainless man sees God, yea, even in this life. Then and then only, all the crookedness of the heart is made straight. Then all doubts cease. Man is no longer the sport of the terrible laws of causation."

Some may prefer to hold that purity itself is God's grace expressing itself as a striving for higher life. But whether this purity is the condition or the consequence of grace, there is no doubt that it is essential for success in all phases of spiritual life. So very rightly do the seers of the Upanishads declare most emphatically, "Neither those who have not refrained from wickedness, nor the unrestrained, nor the unmeditative, nor the one with unpacified mind, can attain the Self even by knowledge" (Katha Up. II, 24).

The paramount necessity for moral culture is well illustrated by the following story of the Upanishads. Once upon a time gods, men and demons went to Prajapati or the creator for instruction. His teaching, however, was enigmatically brief, consisting as it did of only one letter. On being asked by Prajapati as to what they understood, the gods replied that the practice of self-control was enjoined upon them; men said that they were instructed to do acts of charity; lastly the demons answered that they were taught to show compassion towards others. "Therefore," concludes the Upanishad, "one should learn these three—self-control, charity and compassion."

Sankaracharaya, in the course of his well-known commentary on this text, gives the following alternative explanation: "Or there are no gods or demons other than men. Those among men who are wanting in self-control, but at the same time are otherwise endowed with many good qualities, are the gods; those who are particularly greedy are men; and those who are cruel and given to injuring others are demons. So the members of the same species, namely, men, according to their lack of self-control or liability to the other two defects, or according to their tendencies of balance, activity and inertia, are given the titles of gods, etc.

Hence, it is men who should learn all the three instructions, for they are meant for men alone ; because men are observed to be wild, greedy and cruel." The Bhagavad Gita too says, " Lust, anger and greed are the three gateways to hell . . . therefore one should renounce them " (XVI, 3, 21).

ETHICAL AND SPIRITUAL LIFE INSEPARABLE

Ethical practice is thus commonly enjoined upon all spiritual aspirants. As we find in the Bhagavad Gita and other scriptures, there are different paths in spiritual life but there is only one system of moral culture, graduated though it certainly is according to the needs and states of the aspirants. But however important may be the place of ethics in the growth of the spiritual seeker, he must always bear in mind that his goal is something higher, something more than mere practice of morality; for ethical life is only the stepping stone to spiritual culture.

Let us discuss this point further. In Patanjali's book on Yoga the group of virtues consisting of non-injury, truthfulness, non-stealing, chastity and non-covetousness is mentioned as the first of the eight steps to Yoga. Purity, contentment, austerity, study of the scriptures, and the surrender of all acts to the Divine—these form the second step. After the seeker has fulfilled these conditions to a satisfactory extent, he is asked to practise a steady posture, control of breath and withdrawal of the senses from their objects. It is only when he has successfully practised these that his mind becomes fit for the practice of concentration and meditation, which gives him the immediate experience of Reality in the highest superconscious state.

The teachers of the Upanishads very strongly stress this point when they say: "The senses of one who is always of unrestrained mind and devoid of right understanding become uncontrollable like the wicked horses of a charioteer. But of one who is always of restrained mind and has right understanding, the senses are controlled like the good horses of a charioteer. He who is devoid of higher understanding, thoughtless and always impure, never attains the goal; he gets into the round of births and deaths. But he who is intelligent, ever pure, and controlled in mind, reaches that goal whence none is born again. The man who has intelligence for his charioteer and the mind for the well-controlled rein, attains the end of the journey—the supreme state of the all-pervading Self” (Katha Up. III, 5-8).

At the beginning of his spiritual life the aspirant may be able to draw a distinction between moral culture and spiritual practice, but as he advances, the dividing line between the two disappears. The two become indissolubly connected with each other.

THE YOGAS IN BRIEF

Such a synthesis is also noticed with reference to the various types of spiritual discipline—the paths of selfless activity, of devotion, of concentration and of discrimination. Here also there seem to be borderlines at first, but as the aspirant proceeds in his journey, they gradually vanish, and he fails to perceive where one path ends and the other begins.

At the start one may be described as following a particular path according to the dominance of any one of the disciplines mentioned above. But with spiritual growth all the paths get more or less harmonised in the totality of spiritual life, which is a synthetic whole that cannot be divided into anything like watertight compartments.

This is the great lesson we learn from the Bhagavad Gita, which is a veritable compendium of all Hindu scriptures. The term 'Yoga' means dissociation of the Self from things physical and mental, and union with, or realisation of, the Divine—the supreme Being, the Self, existence-knowledge-bliss Absolute. It may also denote the paths which lead to this spiritual realisation.

Supreme peace, born of the highest spiritual experiences, is the same for all aspirants following the apparently different paths. Sri Krishna points this out distinctly: “The well-poised, forsaking the fruits of action, attains peace born of steadfastness” (Gita, V, 12). “Take refuge in the Divine with all thy heart. By His grace wilt thou attain supreme peace and the eternal abode” (Gita, XVIII, 62). “Having attained knowledge, one gains supreme peace at once” (Gita, IV, 39). “Always keeping the mind steadfast in Yoga, the Yogi of subdued mind attains to peace which abides in Me, the Divine—the peace which culminates in final emancipation” (Ibid., VI, 15).

The Bhagavad Gita places different Yogas or methods of spiritual culture before the aspirants of different temperaments and tendencies. As has been mentioned before, these paths may be roughly classed as those of selfless activity, devotion, knowledge and meditation. They may be discussed here in brief.

The tendency to perform action is innate in all beings, and none can remain inactive. In the case of persons who are particularly of an active temperament, what is required is not cessation from action but the proper controlling and directing of their active tendencies. Work with attachment binds the soul, but selfless work performed in a spirit of worship becomes a means of attaining freedom. Says Sri Krishna in the Bhagavad Gita :

“ To one who does actions, forsaking attachment and resigning them to the Divine, evil does not cling just as water does not cling to lotus leaf (V, 10).

“ Though ever engaged in actions, he, having taken refuge in Me, the Lord, attains to the eternal and immutable state by My grace ” (XVIII, 56).

The devotee hankers for union with his beloved Lord with all his heart. Worldly love is not able to satisfy the deep yearnings of his soul. His entire mind flows, as it were, in a continuous stream towards his Lord who is of the nature of ‘ love unspeakable ’. His God is not a being dwelling somewhere in a far off heaven, but is seated in his own heart. In order to see Him and to feel His divine presence he has only to look within. “ The Lord,” says Sri Krishna, “ dwells in the hearts of all beings. Take refuge in Him with all the heart. By His grace shalt thou attain supreme peace and the eternal abode ” (XVIII, 61, 62).

The Jnani or the seeker with a philosophic turn of mind is not satisfied with the little pleasures of this life. He is anxious to know his true nature and the reality at the back of the phenomenal world. He does not feel any great attraction for the personal aspects of the Divinity. He yearns to attain to the Infinite—his true Self. Speaking of those who follow the path of knowledge, Sri Krishna observes in the Bhagavad Gita: “Those who have their intellect absorbed in That, whose Self is That, whose steadfastness is That, they attain to the highest salvation, their impurities being cleansed by knowledge. Relative existence has been conquered by them, even here in this world, whose mind rests in evenness. Since the infinite Self is even and without imperfection, therefore they indeed rest in Him” (V, 17, 19).

The man of a contemplative bent of mind, endowed with tremendous will-power, wants to control the whole of Nature, external and internal. But spasmodic attempts at concentration will lead only to failure and mental depression. The restless mind is to be brought under control slowly and steadily ‘through practice and renunciation’. Speaking of the Yoga of contemplation, Sri Krishna says, "With the understanding steadfast, with the mind fixed on the Self, let the Yogi attain quietude by degrees. By whatever cause the restless, unsteady mind wanders away, let him, curbing it from wandering, bring it back under the control of the Self alone. . . . Verily, supreme bliss comes to the Yogi who has become perfectly tranquil in mind, whose passions are quieted, who is free from impurities, and who has become one with the all-pervading Being" (Bhagavad Gita, VI, 25-27).

HARMONY OF THE YOGAS

All the various spiritual paths can more or less be classed under the four Yogas mentioned above. When we study religious psychology in general and the Bhagavad Gita in particular, we find that these paths are not, as we have already said, like watertight compartments. They are all so interdependent that many of the texts speaking of one are applicable to the others as well. It is, therefore, impossible, as we have seen, to have a clear-cut division between one path and another. The aspirants following one path, no doubt, possess some predominating features that are distinctive of that path, but they have also many traits that they share in common with the followers of other paths.

The person who follows the path of selfless activity has to possess devotion, discrimination and concentration along with non-attachment. Aspirants of the other paths, too, besides being more or less endowed with common ethical qualifications, should have—it may be in varying degrees—all these indispensable elements of spiritual life. Thus it is practically impossible to draw a dividing line between different types of aspirants and the paths they pursue. For example, evenness of mind which Sri Krishna speaks of as Yoga in the Bhagavad Gita is a virtue which all Yogis alike should possess. We may further quote the following verses of the Gita to illustrate the common features of the Yogas :

“ Content with what comes to him without effort, unaffected by the pairs of opposites, free from envy, and even-minded in success and failure, the wise man is not bound even though he be acting (IV, 22).

“ Resigning mentally all deeds in Me, the divine Being, having Me as the highest goal, and resorting to the devotion of right knowledge, do thou ever fix thy mind on Me ” (XVIII, 57).

“ The Yogi who, being established in unity, worships Me dwelling in all beings—he abides in Me, whatever his mode of life may be ” (VI, 31).

All these words of Sri Krishna are more or less applicable to every type of Yogi. There is a conscious or unconscious combination of all noble attributes in the perfect ones as also in all real aspirants.

THE IDEAL OF SYNTHETIC YOGA

The reason of this combination is not far to seek. Human mind is a synthetic whole possessing the faculties of will, feeling and knowledge. The path of selfless activity and that of concentration and meditation both depend more on the faculty of will than on the other inseparable faculties, although the former path is mainly objective while the latter is mainly subjective. In the path of devotion, feeling is the dominant factor, whereas in the path of knowledge, with its discipline of analysis and discrimination, the aspirant relies mainly on intellect or reason. But all the faculties are inseparable, and so are the Yogas ; they all fulfil one another.

Such being the case, is it not desirable to put equal stress on all the four paths of Yoga, and attempt at a simultaneous development of all the mental faculties alike ? Indeed, if this can be done, it would mean an all-round spiritual growth. In the sphere of religion, one-sided development is fraught with dangers. Work sometimes becomes aimless and leads to mere restlessness. Yoga or the path of concentration at times degenerates into physical mortification and pursuit of psychic powers. Devotion often deteriorates into meaningless sentimentalism. And knowledge may also lapse into dry intellectualism and morbid inactivity. Hence there is a great necessity for combining the different paths in order to safeguard against the dangers of following one path to the exclusion of others. Let work be combined with meditation, and knowledge tempered with devotion, and vice versa. Let us try to be equally established in all the Yogas and bring about a harmonious development of all our latent spiritual powers. This all-sided development of personality is the healthiest ideal for any religion or spiritual aspirant to pursue. Speaking of this synthetic Yoga, Swami Vivekananda says : “ Would to God that all men were so constituted that in their minds all these elements of philosophy, mysticism, emotion and work were equally present in full ! That is the ideal, my ideal of a perfect man. Every one who has only one or two of these elements of character, I consider a ' one-sided ' man, with knowledge of that one road only along which he moves ; and anything else is dangerous and horrible to him. To become harmoniously balanced in all these four directions is my ideal of religion."

Thus an embodiment of this synthetic Yoga is the man who is fully illuminated with the light of the highest knowledge, who is ever active in helping others without any thought of his own self, who, intoxicated with divine love, thinks lightly even of salvation, who is perfectly established in the glory of the Self realised through the complete control of the senses and the mind, who has attained to the fullest growth of all his best faculties, and is therefore ' a free man of the whole estate '.

BELIEF IN GOD AND SPIRITUAL LIFE

The intelligent devotee who takes up the path of devotion, no doubt begins his spiritual life with faith in God. In the true devotee, however, even this initial faith is a living force, not a mere conventional allegiance to doctrines as found in the commonalty passing as the faithful in the different religions. But belief in the existence of the God of popular theism may not be possible, or even necessary, for all aspirants of other types. These 'sceptical' or 'agnostic' seekers, to the extent they attain selflessness, sense-control, concentration and mental purity, are certainly moving towards perfection, and in course of time would surely gain the realisation of the ultimate Truth. How this takes place is beyond the understanding of the superficial believer in God, who is living more or less the life of a religious parasite without striving intelligently and consciously for divine communion.

As we have made it clear already, we plead for the life of synthetic Yoga in which the several faculties of man are harmoniously co-ordinated and developed. When the intellect, the will and the feelings are cultured and developed to their fullest possibilities, the seeker transcends these powers of the mind and comes to possess the innate but forgotten faculty of intuition that brings him directly in touch with the ultimate Reality, which the different types of aspirants conceive as God, the supreme Spirit or the Absolute. Thus the divine Being or the supreme Self is to be made the centre and the goal of all these different forms of spiritual culture.

So work and worship, self-analysis and meditation should form inseparable aspects of this synthetic spiritual life. Hence it is necessary that the aspirant should possess a clear conception of the Divinity ; for, as the Bhagavad Gita says, he should fill his mind with Him, be devoted to Him, sacrifice unto Him, bow down to Him, make his heart steadfast in Him, and take Him to be the supreme goal (IX, 34).

PLACE OF MEDITATION IN SPIRITUAL CULTURE

Meditation or Dhyana in some form or other is essential for aspirants of each path as well as for those who want to follow the path of synthetic Yoga. It is therefore necessary to understand what is meant by meditation. It may be defined as the maintenance of an unbroken current of thought on a definite object or theme to the exclusion of all foreign or contrary thoughts.

This can be done only by following a systematic course of practice for a long time. One has to check the wandering mind and turn it away from desires and the sense-objects pertaining to them. In doing this the first step is to disconnect the senses from their objects. Then the senses are to be controlled and the mind is to be brought back to itself. When this has been achieved, the mind can easily be made one-pointed or concentrated. Next comes the question of meditation or dwelling on the divine thought without any break.

As a continuous stream of thought cannot be maintained all of a sudden without preliminary training, the aspirant is compelled to dwell on holy thoughts at first with breaks. To the untrained mind even this is impossible without the help of words and symbols.¹ The aspirant will therefore find it very useful to repeat mystic syllables like 'Om', or contemplate on holy texts like those given in the chapters on meditation in this book and in its companion volume, 'Universal Prayers', by the present writer. One will find this helpful in calling up divine thought. Naturally he will be able to do it only with breaks in the beginning, but steady practice would gradually enable him to maintain a continuous current of thought. Speaking of the practice of meditation, the Bhagavad Gita says, "Abandoning without reserve all fancy-born desires and completely restraining, by the mind alone, the group of senses from their objects in all directions, with the understanding steadfast and with the mind fixed on the Self, let him attain quietude by degrees; let him not think of anything" (VI, 24, 25).

In higher forms of spiritual meditation, the theist attempts to dwell uninterruptedly on either a holy form with or without the setting of the Formless, or on the formless Divinity itself endowed with the noblest of attributes such as omnipresence, omniscience, absolute holiness, infinite mercy, etc. While the monist tries to entertain 'a constant stream of thought of the same kind as that of the existence-knowledge-bliss Absolute, the One without a second, to the exclusion of such foreign ideas as those of the body, mind, etc.' In both cases, meditation means a living touch or communion between the aspirant and the object of his realisation. And as it is prolonged, it ripens into the superconscious state usually called Samadhi, lasting for a comparatively longer time than meditation.

In the theistic as in the lower monistic Samadhi, the distinction of knower, knowledge and the object of knowledge is not lost. But in the highest monistic experience which is attained through the practice of non-dualistic meditations, all distinctions are lost, and there remains the superconscious experience of the One without a second or the Absolute, which can only be realised by becoming one with It but cannot be described by means of words. The familiar example of 'the dumb man's tasting of a delicious sweet' is often cited as an illustration to indicate the ineffable nature of that experience.

But this superconscious state can be attained and retained only by carefully following the spiritual path, proceeding step by step in a true scientific spirit. About the method to be adopted for the realisation of the Self, Sankaracharya observes as follows in his commentary: "It should first be heard of from the teacher and the scriptures, then reflected on with the help of reasoning, and then steadfastly meditated upon. Thus only is It realised—when these disciplinary means, viz., hearing, reflection and meditation, have been gone through. When these three are combined, then only true realisation of the unity of Brahman is accomplished, not otherwise—by hearing alone."

Before the highest Truth is realised, meditations on the Divine are mostly imaginations, but these imaginations are very different from those based on airy nothings. For there are imaginations and imaginations. By seriously thinking of the castle in the air, one is not able to live in it. By taking the mirage to be real, one can never quench one's thirst. By taking the mother-of-pearl to be silver, one is not able to buy food for appeasing one's hunger. These are false imaginations, having no reality at their back, and so they take us away from Truth and make us live in a world of illusion. As distinguished from them, there are other imaginations that are based on Reality and help us in the supreme quest. The self-conscious bubble of the human soul, by meditating on the ocean, realises its true relation with the ocean and becomes one with it. By dwelling on the true nature of the infinite Light, the living ray of light reflected on a particle of sand becomes identified with It. The tiger, accustomed to thinking that it is a sheep, knows itself to be a tiger again by constantly thinking that it is really a tiger and not a sheep. Before knowledge illuminates the soul, it is with thoughts founded on Reality that the forces of nescience have to be counteracted. These helpful thoughts too may be imaginations in one sense, but they are imaginations that take us to the Real.

It is thus that the bound soul realises its union or unity with God, the infinite Principle. The process is, as Sri Ramakrishna puts it, like the removal of a thorn that has got into the flesh, by means of another thorn from the tree. And when the first thorn has been taken out, both the thorns may be thrown away.

THE LAW OF SPIRITUAL GROWTH

The question now arises as to what should be the initial ideal of God and spiritual life which a devotee should entertain at the commencement of spiritual life. The answer is— Let him start from where he stands; let him worship, pray and meditate according to his own conceptions and not according to those of some one else. The child should begin his spiritual life with his childlike ideas, and the grown up person with his advanced ones. Great harm is done to spiritual growth by trying to standardise and drill the thoughts of people. Each aspirant must be free to follow the law of his own being. The child need not be ashamed because he is not a youth ; the youth should not feel sorry that he is not an elderly man. If the child tries to think like a grown-up man, and the latter like the former, no progress is possible. So each should strive to evolve more and more in his own way, and thereby outgrow his previous conception of the spiritual ideal and take up higher and higher ones as a matter of course.

As Swami Vivekananda puts it in a humorous way, "It is good to be born in a Church but not to die there." Institutional religions may try their best to keep their followers in a state of perpetual childhood, but a true aspirant, making the best use of the protection and support given to him during the early years of his life, should outgrow them and stand on his own strength, drawing his inspiration more from the Divine than from men and institutions. This is the secret of growth in the world of true religion. Whoever follows this law evolves, and whoever breaks it remains stunted in growth and may even run the risk of going down in the scale of spiritual evolution and progress.

DIFFERENT CONCEPTIONS OF THE DIVINE

The various conceptions that seekers hold about the Divine vary with their growth and knowledge. As a Sanskrit text points out, "The higher castes worship God in the fire, the advanced seekers meditate on Him in their own hearts, the ignorant think of Him in the image, and those who have attained to the Infinite realise His presence everywhere."

There are devotees who think of God as always associated with divine forms and attributes. Others consider Him to be formless but endowed with not only omniscience and omnipotence but also omnipresence.

Some again combine these ideas and look upon the holy forms as manifestations of the Formless. To them the personal aspect of the Divine is a manifestation of the Impersonal, and both are real. There are others again who try to realise the transcendent Being who, as they hold, is in His real nature beyond all forms and attributes but appears to be associated with them. Speaking of the different aspects of God, Sri Ramakrishna remarks: "God with form and without form are not two different beings. He who is with form is also without form. To the devotee God manifests Himself in various forms. Just think of a shoreless ocean—an infinite expanse of water—no land visible in any direction. Only here and there are visible blocks of ice formed by intense cold. Similarly, under the cooling influence, so to say, of the deep devotion of His worshipper, the Infinite reduces Himself to the finite and appears before him as a being with form. Again, as on the appearance of the sun, ice melts away, so on the appearance of knowledge, God with form melts away in the Formless." He says further : " God is formless, and God is with form too. And He is that which transcends both form and formlessness."

MEDITATION ON THE DIVINE

At the very dawn of human civilisation the Vedic seers inquired, " Who is the Being to whom we should offer our worship and prayer ? " As they pondered over the subject deeply, they got the answer from within, " He who is the giver of spiritual knowledge and of strength, whom the whole world worships, whose command all learned men obey, whose shelter is immortality, whose shadow is death,—He it is to whom we shall offer our prayers and worship " (Rig Veda, X, 121, 1, 2).

During the initial stages of spiritual life, the devotee cannot help thinking of God as outside of himself and as the embodiment of power. He attributes to Him human sentiments, even if he could rise above the conception of human forms. And he wants to come into living touch with Him, to enter into an intimate and personal relationship with Him, and to receive His protection and guidance. A sage of the Rig Veda prayed, "Be of easy approach to us, even as a father to his son. Do Thou, O self-effulgent Lord, abide with us and bring blessings to us" (Rig Veda, I, 1, 2). The advanced devotee clearly sees the Divine also immanent in Nature and worships Him saying, "Salutations to the God who is in the fire, who is in the water, who has pervaded the whole universe, who is in the plants, and who is in the trees" (Svetasvatara Up., II, 17).

Next, as a result of mental purification and introspection brought about by sincere devotion, the aspirant feels within himself the presence of the Divine which he has been worshipping outside. The sages of the Upanishads realised the self-conscious Principle immanent in themselves as well as in all beings and declared, "It is the ear of ear, the mind of the mind, the speech of speech, the breath of breath, the eye of eye" (Kena Up., I, 2). And finally there comes the grand realisation of the infinite divine Existence that is immanent and transcendent at the same time as declared in the Upanishadic passages :

"He who dwells in the earth, and is within the earth, whom the earth does not know, whose body the earth is, and who controls the earth from within,—He is the Self, the controller within, the immortal.

"He who dwells in the sky, and is within the sky, whom the sky does not know, whose body the sky is, and who controls the sky from within—He is the Self, the controller within, the immortal.

"He who dwells in all beings, and is within all beings, whom all beings do not know, whose body all beings are, and who controls all beings from within—He is the Self, the controller within, the immortal.

“He who dwells in the breath, and is within the breath, whom the breath does not know, whose body the breath is, and who controls the breath from within—He is the Self, the controller within, the immortal.

“He who dwells in the mind, and is within the mind, whom the mind does not know, whose body the mind is, and who controls the mind from within—He is the Self, the controller within, the immortal” (Brihad-aranyaka Up., III, VII, 3, 6, 15, 16, 20).

There is yet the realisation of the Absolute which is really beyond all question of immanence and transcendence, which is beyond all speech and thought, which the Upanishads try to describe mostly in negative terms: “It is neither consciousness nor unconsciousness. It is invisible, unrelated, unperceivable, devoid of all connotations, unthinkable, undefinable, essentially of the nature of absolute self-consciousness, negation of all relative existence, infinite peace, supreme bliss and unity" (Mandukya Up., 7—abridged).

THE RELATION BETWEEN GOD AND SOUL

In the passages on meditation on the Divine, we come across different conceptions of the Deity, personal, impersonal, personal-impersonal and also transcendental. Whatever may be the meditations that different devotees choose for themselves, they should try to establish an intimate connection between themselves and the Divine with whom their existence is inseparably connected. Even if God is thought to be outside of oneself, the devotee should try to feel that his finite will is always in touch with His infinite will that controls and directs it. If He is looked upon as the infinite Whole, the aspirant must ever feel that his individual self is ever in contact with that Whole of which it is only a part. It is just as the ocean is inseparable from a particle of water belonging to it, whether the particle is in its usual state or in the form of a bubble; or it is as the finite ocean of light which, though filling all space, is indivisible from the single ray of light that may or may not be reflected on a particle of sand.

“Religion,” says Swami Vivekananda, “is the eternal relation between the eternal soul and the eternal God.” The Upanishads speak of this inseparable relation in language that is both beautiful poetry and profound philosophy: “Two birds of beautiful plumage, closely united in friendship, reside on the self-same tree of the body. One of them eats the sweet fruits thereof, while the other looks on without eating. Seated on the same tree, the individualised being is deluded and grieves over its helplessness. But when it beholds the other—the worshipful Lord—and also His glory, it becomes free from all grief. When the seer realises that effulgent supreme Being—the author, the lord, the creator of even the creator—then that wise seer, having cast off all sin and merit, attains to the supreme stainless unity” (Mundaka Upanishad, III, I, 1-3).

In order to follow the spiritual path with success, the aspirant should have a clear idea of the soul and the Divine, and also cultivate a definite relationship between himself and the object of his adoration. He should first of all ascertain in what stage of evolution he is and with what attitude he should approach the Divine. Then alone can he make any progress in spiritual life. As in the case of the world-view, so also with regard to the soul and the Divine there are three stand-points which are like the three rungs of the same ladder of spiritual life.

The dualistic systems of thought hold that the souls are many in number, and that they are separate from one another and from God who is usually held to be extra-cosmic. But the souls are all dependent on the Divine as a servant is on his master, or a child is on his parents ; they are all controlled by His will and power. According to the qualified non-dualistic ideas, the souls are many in number and yet they all form part of an infinite Whole, who is not a mere sum total of all souls but is immanent and transcendent at the same time. Just as the souls dwell in bodies, so does God dwell in individual souls as the indwelling Spirit or the soul of all souls. In monism or rather non-dualism, the One without a second, the undivided and indivisible existence-knowledge-bliss Absolute, is considered the only reality. For from the ultimate standpoint the multiplicity of souls is regarded only as an appearance that has got empirical reality so long as the highest Truth is not experienced, and the limiting adjuncts of the soul such as the ego, mind, senses, etc., are not realised to be non-self and therefore unreal.

THE THREEFOLD SPIRITUAL REALISATION

To the ordinary mind the three standpoints appear to be contradictory but to the synthetic seer they represent the three stages in the process of spiritual evolution through which man passes in his search after Reality. Swami Vivekananda puts this clearly : “ The religions of the unthinking masses all over the world must be, and have always been, of a God who is outside of the universe, who lives in heaven, who governs from that place, and who is a punisher of the bad and rewarder of the good and so on. As man advanced spiritually, he began to feel that that God was omnipresent, that He was not a distant God, but clearly the soul of all souls . . . And a few individuals who had developed enough and were pure enough, went still further . . . and they found at last that they and the Father were one ” (Complete Works, IV, 143-144).

Man's conception of God evolves with the evolution of his own consciousness. As he comes to possess higher and higher conceptions of himself, his idea of the divine Principle also grows grander and grander, and the relationship between the two, the worshipper and the worshipped, becomes more and more intimate, until perfect union, nay, even unity is established. "O Lord," declared the fully illumined Hindu devotee endowed with the synthetic vision, "when I identify myself with the body, I look upon Thee as my Master and myself as Thy servant. When I think of myself as the individualised soul, I regard Thee as the infinite Whole and myself as Thy part. When I look upon myself as the Spirit transcending all limitations, my individuality is lost in Thee and I realise that I am verily Thyself." A similar idea is expressed by St. John of the Cross, the great Christian mystic, when he says that in the last rung of the mystical ladder, divine love ' makes the soul to be entirely assimilated to God '. This is an experience which only a few can gain, and of those who gain it, none can really describe this state of ' absolute assimilation with the divine Essence '.

The worshipper then rises above all limitations, drops all that is non-self and realises his oneness with the Divine. The great German mystic, Meister Eckehart, thus describes the process by which this divine union is accomplished and unity is realised : " Where the two grow one, one loses its nature. Ergo, for God and soul to be one, the soul has to lose her own life and nature. They are one as regards what is left. But for them to be one, one must lose its identity and the other must keep its identity. Then they are the same." In this non-dualistic stage man realises that the God he has been worshipping first outside himself, and then as the immanent Being, is in reality the transcendent Principle in which there is neither the thought of the one nor of the many, neither even of the immanent nor of the transcendent,—which can be spoken of only as Unity. The man of the highest illumination can at most hint at it, as does Swami Vivekananda, when he says, “All that is real in me is He, all that is real in Him is I.”

To express it in mystical language, the devotee, in trying to find out the centre of his soul, realises his unity with the Divine whose centre is everywhere ; in attempting to know the circumference of his being, he discovers that he is the same as the Oversoul whose circumference is nowhere. The dividing line between the external and the internal, between I and Thou, between the subject and the object, disappears completely, and one realises the infinite transcendental Reality. The seers of the Upanishads tried to express this in mystical language as follows : “This Immutable is never seen, but is the witness ; It is never heard, but is the hearer ; It is never thought about, but is the thinker ; It is never known, but is the knower. There is no other witness but this, no other hearer but this, no other thinker but this, no other knower but this. By this Immutable is the (unmanifested) ether pervaded" (Brihadaran-yaka Up., III, VIII, 2).

The Buddha, the enlightened one, refers in negative terms to this transcendental experience when he says: "He in whom passion for all lusts is gone, who rests on nothingness and has put aside all else, who is released in the highest of releases of perception, shall abide there without departing from it . . . There is a condition wherein there is neither earth, nor water, nor fire, nor air, nor the sphere of infinite space, nor the sphere of infinite consciousness, nor the sphere of void, nor the sphere of perception, where there is neither this world, nor the world beyond."

The Sufi mystics speak thus of their divine realisation in terms of love and unity: "Whoever enter in Love's city, finds room only for One and only in Oneness union

. . . In God there is no duality. In that presence 'I' and 'me' do not exist. 'I' and 'me' and 'thou' become one. Since in unity there is no distinction, the quest, the way and the seeker become one."

THE DIRECT MONISTIC APPROACH— ITS CONDITIONS

There are ordinarily two types of spiritual aspirants. The majority who come under one type want to worship God as the supreme Being endowed with some form or other. They want also to enter into a personal relationship with Him as Master, Father, Mother, Friend or Beloved, or to establish a personal-impersonal connection with Him as the infinite Whole and the soul of souls. Aspirants falling under the second type, who however are very few in number, want to realise the divine Principle as their very Self or as the One without a second. Unable to adopt the discipline directly leading to this realisation, even most of the seekers of this group have to follow the graduated course of dualism, qualified monism and monism. But as distinct from these there are some rare and highly qualified aspirants in whom moral perfection, freedom from desires and the spirit of detachment have reached a high standard of development. They resolutely follow the direct path to the Absolute, transcending subject-object relationships of all kinds.

The devotees who worship God as endowed with some form or other pursue the objective method and put the greatest stress on the object of their worship and adoration, with whom they want to unite their souls. The out and out monistic aspirant, on the other hand, follows from the very beginning the subjective form of spiritual practice in which the objects 'of meditation is no other than his own true Self which is infinite and absolute by nature'. He usually meditates on the monistic maxim, 'I am Brahman' or 'Thou art That'. By means of this he tries to expand his limited consciousness to infinite and absolute Consciousness or Super-consciousness, rising above all limitations, physical and mental. At first he takes the help of the dualism of subject and object inseparable from relative existence, though in this he stresses the subject or Self more than the object. And finally, he attains that which transcends all duality and relativity, all conceptions of the knower, known and knowledge. In the words of Sri Ramakrishna, he is like a salt doll that gets merged in the ocean.

The mental purification attained through strenuous ethical culture and intense meditation enables the aspirant to awaken his intuitive power. He is, as it were, brought face to face with Reality, and he gains identification with It. This faculty of intuition is not something created or produced. It is an innate capacity for direct experience lying dormant in the soul, and is manifest the moment the obstructions that stand in its way are removed. Spiritual practices including meditation and the like only remove obstacles in the shape of false knowledge, as a consequence of which true knowledge of the Absolute manifests itself, just as the sun hidden by the clouds shines in all his glory when the clouds are dispersed by the wind.

The theistic worshipper may proceed from lower conceptions of the Divine to higher ones and get some resting place on the way. This also is the case, to some extent, with regard to the aspirant who wants to attain his monistic goal by stages. Making his own soul the centre of his being, he experiences in it the touch of the Divine as infinite Consciousness or Presence from which his existence is inseparable—a fact not recognised before owing to ignorance. Subsequently, with the unfolding of his spiritual powers, the seeker comes to be identified with the Infinite and to think in terms of the Infinite. He regards his personality and also all other personalities as manifestations or modes of the all-pervading Principle. First realising the One as connecting the many, and then the many as manifestations of the One, he is finally enabled to attain to the transcendental experience of the One without a second, in which the question of the One and the many does not arise at all. He thus follows the graduated path leading to the Absolute.

But the task of the aspirant who does not want to stop at any of the half-way houses on the way is much harder than that of others. So he must be better equipped than others, and must possess special qualifications that would help him to march directly to the goal. Discrimination between the real and the unreal ; dispassion for all enjoyments both here and hereafter ; virtues like control of the mind and the senses, withdrawal of the self from objects, forbearance, concentration, and faith in the ideal and the path ; and an yearning for perfect freedom—these are the qualifications required of such resolute aspirants. When these conditions are fulfilled, the aspirant is able to take up the highest form of meditation on the One without a second, and attain to the superconscious state of the Absolute in due course.

MONISTIC MEDITATIONS

The conviction of the monist is effectively expressed in the statements: "The Absolute alone is real; the phenomenon is unreal. The individualised soul is no other than the Absolute." He tries to realise this ideal by bringing home to himself through analysis, meditation, etc., the unreality of phenomenal existence including his own individuality, and by convincing himself of the reality of the Self and of the Absolute which appears, through the medium of time, space and causation, as relative existence consisting of the world of thought and matter. He denies the multiplicity of phenomenon and asserts the unity of existence. This denial is, however, the result of a deeper assertion—the assertion of the supreme Principle wherein there is no differentiation of the knower, known and knowledge, and which is infinite, transcendental and the essence of knowledge. In the following emphatic words Sankaracharya expresses this positive ground of the denials of the monist :

“ I am neither mind nor intellect, neither memory nor ego ; I am not the senses of hearing or taste, of smell or sight. I am neither ether nor earth, neither fire nor air. I am the absolute knowledge and bliss. I am the Self all-pervading, I am the Self all-pervading.

“ I am the Self, changeless, formless, and omnipresent. I am beyond the touch of sense attachment. I am beyond all bondage of relative knowledge. I am the Self all-pervading, I am the Self all-pervading.”

So long as the monist goes on with his denial and assertion, he has not yet risen to the experience of the Absolute. He is still trying to remove the dream of multiplicity and get the awareness of Unity or the Absolute. After having attained to it, when he comes down to what may be termed the threshold that separates the superconscious experience of the Absolute from relative consciousness of the world, and tries to describe his previous experience, he does so more in terms of negation than assertion.

As the monistic goal is often misunderstood and misinterpreted, it is necessary to have a clear conception of it. Sankaracharya, the best authority on the system, sheds much light on its essential principle when he says, "It is the wave that merges itself in the ocean, not the ocean in the wave. So, verily, O Lord, when all distinctions are removed, it is I that became absorbed in Thee, not Thou in me" (Shatpadi, 3). The wave as such can never become the ocean. Only by dissociating itself from the waveform and participating in the nature of its true substance, namely, water, can the wave get itself merged in the ocean and be one with it. The finite can never become the Infinite. What appears to be finite, is really the Infinite. Self-realisation is only the discovery of this eternal truth. The finite, by shedding its false sense of finitude, realises its own essential nature as the Infinite. The Upanishads describe this process by means of very happy similies. "As pure water poured into pure water becomes the same," says the Katha Upanishad, describing this process, "so does the Self of the sage who has known the all-pervading Being become That" (IV, 15).

STRENGTHENING THE MORAL FIBRE

Are the monistic meditations of any use to those who intellectually appreciate them but cannot follow the monistic path of Self-realisation? Yes, they may read these and dwell on their meaning when they are not engaged in their own forms of spiritual practice and meditation. To the extent they are able to realise the glory of the Self, they will be strengthening their moral fibre.

According to all the great schools of Vedanta, the soul of man is pure by nature, and religion does not signify the super-addition of anything to it by an outside agency. It is, on the other hand, as Swami Vivekananda puts it, 'the manifestation of the Divinity already in man'. As dirt cannot wash off dirt, so the constant thought of sin cannot remove sin. The realisation of man's true nature and its relation to the Divine is the surest way of freeing oneself from sin and its root-cause, ignorance. This is why the Vedanta stresses the potential Divinity of man, and ever enjoins on the aspirant to remember and realise it.

The constant thought of one's true Self and of Its innate purity and divinity serves as a great incentive to moral and spiritual life. It helps one to overcome immorality and weakness, to manifest holiness and strength, and to live a nobler life. Says Swami Vivekananda : “ Let every man and woman and child without respect of birth or caste, weakness or strength, hear and learn that behind the strong and the weak, behind the high and the low, behind everyone, there is that infinite soul, assuring the infinite possibility and infinite capacity of all to become great and good. Teach yourself, teach everyone his real nature. Call upon the sleeping soul to see how it awakes. Power will come, glory will come, goodness will come, purity will come, and everything that is excellent will come, when this sleeping soul is roused to self-conscious activity.”

STRENGTHENING THE SENSE OF UNITY

The monistic meditations may serve another purpose. They will bring to the sincere seeker a stronger sense of unity and human solidarity. According to Vedanta, unity, even as purity, is not merely the law of the Prophets but the law of our being as well. It is the law of the God within, the Self of all. And these laws are to be realised by subordinating our lower nature to the higher nature, our lower self to the higher Self. As the Vedantic teachers hold, the foundation of morals lies in the metaphysical fact of the unity of all beings in the universal Self. Ethics thus comes to have not only a utilitarian value but also a philosophical support and metaphysical justification.

We all know from experience that neither divine commandment nor scriptural injunction can make the average man moral. In order to be convinced, he wants a more rational justification of morality, especially when he has outgrown the stage of blind belief in dogmas. Speaking on this point, Dr. Deussen, the great Vedantic scholar of Germany, rightly observes: "The Gospels fix quite correctly as the highest law of morality: Love your neighbour as yourself. But why should I do so, since by the order of Nature I feel pain and pleasure only in myself, not in my neighbour? The answer is not in the Bible (this venerable book being not yet quite free of Semitic realism), but it is in the Veda, is in the great formula, 'Tat Tvam Asi' (Thou art That), which gives in three words metaphysics and morals all together. You shall love your neighbour as yourselves, because you are your neighbour and mere illusion makes you believe that your neighbour is something different from yourselves."

With deep insight does a Western writer observe on this point, "Here we have deeply laid the metaphysical foundation of the duty of loving our neighbour and acting towards him as though he was our Self. 'That thou art'—that is to say, there is a deeper inclusive Self in which you and he are one; and loving service is the note or sign of this practical identity."

The same idea is expressed in the Bhagavad Gita with reference to the man of God-vision: "Seeing the Lord existent everywhere, he injures not the Self by the Self." And not only that, he becomes 'engaged in the good of all beings'. We thus see that the common source of all moral forces of goodness and unity lies within us, in the God within, in the one Self, in the universal Principle of existence and light manifesting Itself in all and through all. In the recognition of this divine Principle lies the hope of true fellowship and world-unity that we need so urgently in our disturbed and distracted world.

Thus, rightly understood, the doctrine of the One—the boldest synthesis in the whole history of human thought—is not a lifeless abstraction, but a practical system which fulfils life. To quote the memorable words of Prof. Max Müller: "After lifting the Self above body and soul, after uniting heaven and earth, God and man, Brahman and Atman, these Vedanta philosophers have destroyed nothing in the life of the phenomenal beings who have to act and to fulfil their duties in this phenomenal world. On the contrary, they have shown that there can be nothing phenomenal without something that is real, and that goodness, virtue, faith, and works are necessary as a preparation, nay, as the sine qua non for the attainment of the highest knowledge which brings the soul back to its source and home, and restores it to its true nature, to its Selfhood in Brahman."

THE PERFECT MAN AND THE ULTIMATE GOAL

"Verily," declare the Upanishads, "he becomes Brahman who realises Brahman. He overcomes evil and transcends grief. Being free from all knots of the heart, he attains to immortality" (Mundaka Up., III, II, 9). Having attained to transcendental consciousness, he rises above the phenomenal. In the highest state of super-consciousness, the phenomenon altogether disappears for him. Even when he becomes partially conscious of it and gains an awareness of his body, mind and surroundings, still he retains his superconscious bent. His whole outlook on life is revolutionised by his transcendental experience. He no longer feels any sense of identification with the objects of the external world but ever remains the witness of them all.

An enlightened sage of this type, who is established in supreme knowledge, is described as one of steady wisdom. Of him the Bhagavad Gita says: "When a man has cast away all the desires of his heart and feels satisfied in the Self alone, then he is said to be one of steady wisdom. Having realised in the transcendental state, the Self dwelling equally in all, he hates no creatures, and is friendly and compassionate towards all. He is free from the feelings of 'I and mine'. Even-minded in pain and pleasure, forbearing, ever content, steady in meditation, self-controlled, possessed of firm convictions, he has his mind and intellect fixed on the Divine.”

For the enlightened soul, it is no longer necessary to deny the reality of the phenomenon and assert the reality of the Self even when he is not in the highest state of super-consciousness. Further, being established in the glory of the Self, he has transcended all moral conflicts that are bound to exist as long as one is in relative existence. All evils having been eliminated through strenuous moral and spiritual practice, there remain for him, during the state in which he is somewhat conscious of the world, only the good desires which existed before the dawn of supreme knowledge. Speaking of the perfect man, a teacher of Vedanta says, “ After realisation, humility and other attributes which are steps to the attainment of knowledge, as also such virtues as non-injury, etc., persist like so many ornaments ” (Vedantasara).

In the words of Sri Ramakrishna, the man of Self-realisation, like the expert dancer, can never take a false step, although he does not care, like the beginner, to follow every rule by a special effort of the will. In whatever he does, his conduct is in full agreement with the highest ethics, and he is rightly said to be above the distinctions of relative good and relative evil. As Prof. Max Müller correctly observes, "This is never intended as freedom in the sense of license, but as freedom that can neither lapse into sinful acts, nor claim any merit for good acts, being at rest and blessed in itself and Brahman."

Having fully attained the goal of life, the enlightened ones no longer live for any objects of their own. Their body and mind being in tune with the cosmic Power and Will, they live only for fulfilling some cosmic purpose. They may engage themselves in active work for the good of others, or sit still in communion with the universal Self.

But whether they work or not, they set an ideal of the highest perfection and knowledge to impure and ignorant humanity. Besides, they surcharge the psychical world with their intensive spiritual thoughts and thus fertilise it to the benefit of others. Their very presence is a blessing to mankind. They promote the good of the world even through silence.

Thus, realising the Eternal and the Immortal as their own Self, they remain free in life as in death. They do not belong to any particular religion or country; for having attained to the Divine, they have become the Divine, and as such one with the souls of all. May their noble lives and examples be a source of abiding inspiration to the seekers after Truth all the world over!

1. The Self is not born, nor does It die. It has not come into being from anything, nor does anything come into being from It. This unborn, eternal, everlasting and ancient one suffers no destruction with the destruction of the body.

2. Smaller than the smallest and greater than the greatest, the Self dwells in the hearts of all creatures. Those who are without worldly desires realise the glory of the Self, free from grief, through the purification of the senses and the mind.

3. That infinite effulgent Being is inconceivable by nature. He is subtler than the subtlest, farther than the farthest, and He is ever here within the body. He is realised by the seers as residing within the heart.

4. As are childhood, youth and old age to the soul embodied in this body, so also is to it the attaining of another body. Wise men are not deluded thereat.

5. These material bodies, which the ever-changeless, indestructible and illimitable Self indwells, are said to be transient.

6. He who takes the Self to be the slayer, and he who takes It to be the slain—neither of them knows the truth. It does neither slay nor is It slain. It is never born ; never does It die. It is not that, not having been born, It again comes into being. It is unborn, eternal, permanent and ever Itself. It is not killed when the body is killed.

7. He who knows It to be indestructible, changeless, without birth and immutable—how can he slay or cause the slaying of another ?

8. Even as a man casts off worn-out clothes and puts on others which are new, so does the embodied soul cast off worn-out bodies and enter into others which are new.

10. This Self cannot be cut, nor burnt, nor wetted, nor dried. It is changeless, all-pervading, unmoving, immovable and eternal.

11. This Self is said to be unmanifested, unthinkable and unchangeable. Therefore, knowing It to be such, thou oughtest not to mourn.

12. Some look upon the Self as marvellous. Others speak of It as wonderful. Others again hear of It as a wonder. And still others, though hearing, do not understand It at all.

13. This, the Indweller in the bodies of all, is ever industructible. Therefore thou oughtest not to mourn for any creature.

14. This body is called the ' field ', and he who knows it is called the knower of the ' field '.

15. Do thou know the Divine to be the knower in all the bodies.

16. The great elements that compose all material phenomena, ego, intellect, the unmanifested cause of all these, the ten senses, the mind, the five objects of senses, desire, hatred, pleasure, fear, body, intelligence, fortitude,—briefly described, this is the Kshetra (Field, i.e., matter) with its modifications.

17. I will now describe that which has to be known, knowing which one attains to immortality : It is the beginningless supreme Brahman (the Infinite) ; It is called neither being nor non-being.

18. With hands and feet everywhere, with eyes, heads and mouths everywhere, with ears everywhere in the universe, the supreme Being exists pervading all.

19. It manifests Itself through the functions or all the senses, yet It is without senses. It is unattached, yet It sustains all. It is free from relative existence, yet It is the experiencer of it.

20. It is without and within all beings. It is motionless and yet It moves. On account of Its subtlety It is incomprehensible. It is both far and near.

21. Though impartible, yet It exists as if divided in beings. It is to be known as the sustainer of beings, generating them and reabsorbing them again into Itself.

22. The light even of lights, It is said to be beyond darkness. Knowledge, the one to be known and the goal of knowledge—It dwells in the hearts of all.

23. Know thou that Nature and Spirit are both beginningless ; and know thou also that all modifications and Gunas (relative existence) are born of Nature.

24. In the production of the body and the senses, Nature is said to be the cause ; in the experience of pleasure and pain, Spirit is said to be the cause.

25. Spirit seated in Nature experiences the relative world born of Nature ; the reason for Its births in good and evil wombs is the Spirit's attachment to the objects of the relative world.

26. The supreme Spirit dwelling in the body is called the witness, the permitter, the supporter, the experiencer, the great lord and also the highest self.

27. Whatever is born, the moving and the unmoving, know that it is through the union of Matter and Spirit.

28. As It is beginningless and devoid of the taints of relative existence, this immutable, supreme Self neither acts nor is affected even while existing in the body.

29. As the all-pervading ether is not tainted because of its subtlety, so the Self existing everywhere in the body is not tainted.

30. As the one sun illumines all this world, so does the Spirit that abides in the body illumine the whole body.

Bhagavad Gita, XV, 7-10.

31. An eternal portion of Myself, having become a living soul in the world of life, draws to it the five senses and the mind, all of which abide in Nature.

32. When the individualised soul—who is a portion of the Eternal—obtains a body, and when he leaves it, he takes these and goes, as the wind takes the scents from their seats, the flowers.

33. Presiding over the five senses—the ear, the eye, the touch, the taste and the smell—as also the mind, He experiences objects.

34. Whether transmigrating from one body to another, or residing in it and experiencing it due to the union with matter and its constituents, the deluded do not see Him, but those who have the eye of wisdom behold Him.

35. The effulgent, all-pervading Being, having innumerable heads and innumerable eyes, is the origin of all the good that exists in the world. He has manifested Himself as the universe and He is again the great Deity pervading the elements. He is the supreme Lord of all, beyond all change.

36. He transcends the whole world, and also manifests Himself as the whole world. He is the eternal Being, the support of all, the remover of evil. The existence of the whole world depends on Him.

He is the master of the world, the supreme self, the lord, the permanent good, the changeless, the cosmic being, the great goal of knowledge, the self of the universe and the supreme refuge.

38. This is the truth : As from a blazing fire, there shoot out, by thousands, sparks of the same appearance, so do the various beings originate from that Imperishable, and verily, unto It they go back again.

39. From the imperishable Being are born vital energy, mind, all the senses, ether, air, fire, water and also the earth which is the support of all.

40. Heaven is the head of the imperishable Being ; the moon and the sun are His two eyes ; the directions are His ears ; the revealed scripture sare His speech ; the air is His breath ; the universe is His heart ; and from His feet originated the earth. Verily, He is the inner Self of all beings.

Brihadaranyakopanishad, III, 8, 9.

42. Seated on the same tree, the individualised being is deluded and grieves over his helplessness. But when he beholds the other—the worshipful Lord—as also His glory, he becomes free from all grief.

43. That which is the subtle essence—in That has everything its self. That is the self ; That is the true ; That thou art.

44. Through fear of Him the wind blows. Through fear of Him the sun rises. Through fear of Him, the god of fire, the god of rain and the god of death, the fifth, run to do their respective works.

45. At the command of the imperishable Being, the sun and the moon stand apart in their courses ; at the command of the imperishable Being, the earth and the sky stand apart ; at the command of the imperishable Being, time with its moments, hours, days, nights, half-months, months, seasons and years stand regulated.

46. This whole universe is filled by the all-pervading Being, to whom there is nothing superior, and than whom there is nothing smaller or larger. Rooted in His own glory, He—the One without a second—stands immovable like a mighty tree.

47. He is the one Deity hidden in all beings, the all-pervading Self abiding in all beings, the controller of all activities, the indwelling Self of all, the witness, the enlightener, the absolute beyond all attributes.

48. All this world is pervaded by Me, the Divine, in My unmanifested form ; all beings exist in Me but I do not dwell in them. Nor do beings exist in Me in reality ; bringing forth and supporting all beings, My self does not really dwell in them. Behold My divine power !

49. As the mighty wind, moving always everywhere, rests ever in the ether, know thou that even so do all beings rest in Me—the Divine.

50. I, the divine Being, am the father of this world as also its mother, sustainer and ultimate cause. I am the purifier and the one thing to be known. I am also the holy word 'Om', and the revealed knowledge embodied in the Vedas.

51. I am the goal, the supporter and the lord, the witness and the abode, the refuge and the friend. I am the origin, the dissolution, the substratum, the storehouse and the seed immutable.

52. I, the Divine, am the same to all beings. To Me there is none hateful or dear ; but those who worship Me with devotion, they are in Me, and I too am in them.

53. The light which, residing in the sun, in the moon and in the fire, illumines the whole world—know that light to be Mine.

54. I am enthroned in the hearts of all ; memory, perception and their loss come from Me. I am verily that which has to be known by all the scriptures. I, indeed, am the inspirer of their highest wisdom and the knower of their truth.

55. There are these two categories of 'being' in this world—the Perishable and the Imperishable. The Perishable comprises all creatures. That which manifests itself as the phenomenal existence is called the Imperishable.

56. But there is another, the highest Being, called the supreme Spirit. As the eternal Lord, He sustains the three worlds, having pervaded them.

THE WAYS OF THE SPIRITUAL AND THE WORLDLY-MINDED

असंशयं महाबाहो ! मनो दुर्निग्रहं चलम् ।
अभ्यासेन तु कौन्तेय ! वैराग्येण च गृह्यते ॥
असंयतात्मना योगो दुष्प्राप इति मे मतिः ।
वश्यात्मना तु यतता शक्योऽवाप्तुमुपायतः ॥

Without doubt the mind is restless and difficult to be controlled, but through practice and non-attachment it may be governed.

Yoga is hard to be attained by one of uncontrolled self ; but the self-controlled, striving by right means, can obtain it.

Bhagavad Gita, VI, 35, 36.

57. One, perchance, in thousands strives for perfection ; and one, perchance, among the blessed ones striving thus, knows Me in reality.

58. Those who are wicked, ignorant and vile—they do not devote themselves to Me, being deprived of discrimination by ignorance and following the way of the demons.

59. Four kinds of virtuous men worship Me—the distressed, the seekers of knowledge, the seekers of enjoyment, and the wise.

60. Verily, of vain hopes, of vain works, and of vain knowledge are the ignorant senseless souls possessed of the stupefying nature of demons and devils.

61. But the great-souled ones, possessed of divine nature, know Me—the Divine—to be the origin of beings and immutable, and worship Me with undistracted mind.

सततं कीर्तयन्तो मां यतन्तश्च दृढव्रताः ।

62. Glorifying the Divine always, strenuous and steadfast in their vows, and bowing down to Me in devotion, they always worship Me with constant love.

63. The Yogis striving for perfection behold the Divine dwelling in themselves ; but the unrefined and unintelligent, even though striving, see Him not.

64. Fearlessness, purity of heart, steadfastness in knowledge and Yoga, giving away in charity, control of the senses, sacrifice, reading of the scriptures, austerity, uprightness, non-injuriousness, truth, absence of anger, renunciation, tranquillity, absence of calumny, compassion for beings, non-covetousness, gentleness, modesty, absence of fickleness ;

65. Boldness, forgiveness, fortitude, purity, absence of hatred, absence of pride—these belong to one born to a divine heritage.

66. Ostentation, arrogance, self-conceit, anger, harshness and ignorance—these belong to one who is born to a demoniac heritage.

The divine heritage is deemed as making for liberation and the demoniac for bondage. Grieve not, for thou art born to the heritage of the gods.

67. The persons of demoniac nature know not what to do and what to refrain from ; neither purity, nor good conduct, nor truth is in them.

They say, “ This universe is without truth, without moral basis, and without a God ; it is brought about by mutual union, having lust and nothing else for its cause.”

68. Filled with insatiable desires ; obsessed by ostentation, pride and arrogance ; holding evil ideas through delusion—they work with impure resolve.

69. Beset with immense cares ending only with death, regarding gratification of lust as the highest aim, and feeling sure that this is all ;

70. Bound by a hundred ties of hope, given over to lust and wrath, they strive to secure hoards of wealth by unjust means for sensual enjoyment.

71. "This has been gained by me to-day; that desire will I gratify next; this wealth is mine, and that also shall be mine in future.

72. "That enemy has been slain by me, and others also will I slay. I am the lord of all and their enjoyer, I am successful, powerful and happy.

73. "I am rich and well-born. Who else is equal to me? I will perform ritualistic sacrifice, I will give, I will rejoice."—Thus are they deluded by ignorance.

74. Bewildered by many a fancy, entrapped in the meshes of delusion, and addicted to the gratification of lust, they fall down into a most degraded state.

75. Self-conceited, haughty, filled with pride and intoxication of wealth, they perform sacrifices in name, out of ostentation, disregarding ordinances.

76. Possessed of egoism, power, insolence, lust and wrath, these malignant people hate Me—the Self within their own bodies and in those of others.

77. These malicious and cruel evil-doers, most degraded of men, are born perpetually in the race of the demoniacs only, in the cycles of births and deaths.

78. Being born as the demoniac, and deluded birth after birth, they thus fall into a still lower condition without attaining Me.

79. Triple are the gates to hell, ruinous to the soul of man—lust, anger and greed. Therefore one should avoid these three.

80. The man who has made his escape from these three gates of darkness, ensures his own welfare, and in the end reaches the supreme goal.

81. He who, discarding the ordinance of the scriptures, acts under the impulse of desire, attains not to perfection, nor to happiness, nor to the goal supreme.

IV

THE THREEFOLD NATURE OF MEN AND THINGS

ये चैव सात्विका भावा राजसास्तामसाश्च ये ।
मत्त एवेति तान् विद्धि नत्वहं तेषु ते मयि ॥
त्रिभिर्गुणमयैर्भावैरेभिः सर्वमिदं जगत् ।
मोहितं नाभिजानाति मामेभ्यः परमव्ययम् ॥

Whatever states there are pertaining to 'purity', and whatever to 'passion' and to 'dullness', know them to proceed from Me alone; still I am not in them, but they are in Me.

Deluded by these states,—the modifications of the three Gunas (forces of Nature)—all this world does not know Me, the transcendent, immutable Divinity.

Bhagavad Gita, VII, 12, 13.

दैवी ह्येषा गुणमयी मम माया दुरत्यया ।

मामेव ये प्रपद्यन्ते मायामेतां तरन्ति ते ॥ ८२ ॥

Bhagavad Gita, VII, 14.

तमस्त्वज्ञानजं विद्धि मोहनं सर्वदेहिनाम् ।

प्रमादालस्यनिद्राभिस्तन्निबध्नाति भारत ! ॥ ८६ ॥

82. Verily, this divine Maya of Mine, manifesting itself as the Gunas (relative existence), is difficult to cross over ; those who devote themselves to Me and to Me alone, can overcome it.

83. Sattva (harmony or purity), Rajas (passion), Tamas (inertia or dullness)—these forces of Nature (Gunas) fetter the indestructible Spirit in the body.

84. Of these, Sattva (purity), being stainless, is illuminating and free from evil. It binds one through attachment to happiness and knowledge.

85. Know Rajas to be of the nature of passion, giving rise to thirst and attachment. It binds fast the embodied by attachment to action.

86. And know Tamas (dullness) to be born of ignorance, deluding all embodied beings ; it binds fast by heedlessness, indolence and sleep.

Bhagavad Gita, XIV, 5-13.

कर्मणः सुकृतस्याहुः सात्त्विकं निर्मलं फलम् ।

रजसस्तु फलं दुःखमज्ञानं तमसः फलम् ॥ ९२ ॥

87. 'Purity' causes attachment to happiness and 'passion' to action, while 'dullness', verily enshrouding discrimination, binds one to heedlessness.

88. 'Purity' prevails when it overcomes 'passion' and 'dullness'; 'passion', when it overpowers 'purity' and 'dullness'; and in like manner 'dullness' predominates when 'purity' and 'passion' are overcome.

89. When the light of intelligence gleams forth from every portal of the body, then one may be sure that 'purity' is predominant.

90. Greed, activity, enterprise, restlessness, longing—these arise when 'passion' is predominant.

91. Darkness, stagnation, heedlessness, delusion—these arise when 'dullness' is predominant.

92. The fruit of 'pure' action is good and taintless; the fruit of 'passion' is misery; and the fruit of 'dullness' is ignorance.

प्रमादमोहौ तमसो भवतोऽज्ञानमेव च ॥ ९३ ॥

93. From 'purity' arises wisdom; from 'passion' greed; and from 'inertia' arise heedlessness, delusion and ignorance.

94. When the seer beholds no agent other than the forces of Nature, and knows that which is beyond, he attains to My being.

95. The embodied, having transcended this triune Nature which is the cause of the body, frees himself from birth, death, decay and misery, and attains to immortality.

96. The foods which increase life, energy, strength, health, happiness and cheerfulness, and which are savoury and oleaginous, substantial and agreeable—they are dear to the 'pure'.

97. The foods that are excessively bitter, sour, saline, hot, pungent, dry and burning—they are liked by the 'passionate', and they produce pain, grief and disease.

98. The foods which are stale, turned tasteless, putrid and corrupt, which are the leavings of others and impure—they are dear to the 'dull'.

99. That worship is 'pure', which is enjoined by scriptural ordinances, and which is performed by men desiring no fruit and having implicit faith in worship as a duty.

100. That worship which is performed for the sake of its fruits and for display, know it to be the product of 'passion'.

101. That worship which is contrary to scriptural commands, in which no food is distributed, which is devoid of the chanting of the holy hymns, and is without gifts and faith—it is said to be the product of 'dullness'.

102. Worship of the Divine, the holy men, the teachers and the wise; purity, straight-forwardness, continence and harmlessness—these are called the austerity of the body.

103. Speech, which causes no vexation, and is true, agreeable and beneficial, as also regular study of the scriptures—these are said to form the austerity of speech.

104. Serenity of mind, kindness, silence, self-control, honesty of motive—these are called austerity of the mind.

105. This threefold austerity, practised by devout men with great faith and desiring no fruit, is said to be 'pure'.

106. That austerity which is practised with the object of gaining respect, honour and worship, and for show, is said to be 'passionate'. It is unstable and transitory.

107. That austerity which is practised out of foolish notions by means of self-torture or for the purpose of ruining another, is declared to spring from 'dullness'.

108. That gift which is given from a sense of duty to one who can make no return, and which is done in a right place, at an opportune time and to a fit person—it is considered 'good'.

109. But what is given for the sake of return, or aiming at the fruit, or again grudgingly—that gift is held to be 'passionate'.

अदेशकाले यद् दानमपात्रेभ्यश्च दीयते ।

110. The gift that is made at the wrong place and time to unworthy persons, without respect or with disdain—that is declared to be ‘dull’.

111. The practice of worship, gift and austerity should not be relinquished, but should certainly be performed; for worship, gift and austerity are purifying even to the wise.

112. But even these actions should be performed, relinquishing attachment and the fruits. This is My best and certain conviction.

113. The abandonment of an obligatory action is not proper. Its abandonment from delusion is declared to be the result of ‘dullness’.

114. He who from fear of bodily troubles relinquishes action because it is painful, does so only due to ‘passion’ and obtains not the fruit thereof.

115. But he who performs a prescribed duty as something that ought to be done, but renounces all attachment and also the fruit—his abandonment is regarded to be 'pure'. The relinquisher, endued with 'purity' and a steady understanding, and free from doubts, neither hates a disagreeable work, nor is attached to an agreeable one.

116. That by which the one imperishable Substance is seen in all beings, inseparable in the separated, know that knowledge to be 'pure'.

117. But that knowledge which, due to differentiation, sees in all beings various entities of distinct kinds, know that knowledge to be 'passionate'.

118. Whilst that which clings to one single effect, as if it were the whole, without reason, truth or insight, trivial—that is declared to be 'dull'.

121. That action is declared to be 'dull', which is undertaken through delusion, without heed to the consequences, loss, injury and ability.

122. An agent who is free from attachment and egotism, endowed with fortitude and enthusiasm, and unaffected in success and failure, is called 'pure'.

123. An agent who is passionate, desiring the fruits of action, greedy, violent, impure, and easily elated or dejected, is said to be 'passionate'.

124. Unsteady, vulgar, arrogant, dishonest, malicious, indolent, despondent and procrastinating—such an agent is called 'dull'.

125. That which knows the paths of work and renunciation, right and wrong action, fear and fearlessness, bondage and liberation—that intellect is ‘pure’.

126. That which has a distorted apprehension of righteousness and its opposite, and also of right action and its opposite—that intellect is ‘passionate’.

127. That which, being enveloped in darkness, regards unrighteousness as righteousness, and views all things in a perverted light—that intellect is ‘dull’.

128. The firmness by which the functions of the mind, the vital forces and the senses are regulated—that firmness which has become unswerving through Yoga, is of the nature of ‘purity’.

129. But that by which one holds fast to righteous conduct, pleasure and wealth, and desires the fruit of each on its occasion—that firmness is of the nature of ‘passion’.

130. That by which a stupid man does not give up sleep, fear, grief, despondency and overweening conceit—that firmness is of the nature of ‘dullness’.

131. That happiness which one learns to enjoy through practice, by which one comes to the end of pain, and which is like poison at first but like nectar at the end, is declared to be ‘pure’; it is born of the transcendence of intellect due to Self-realisation.

132. That happiness which arises from the contact of object with sense, which, though at first like nectar, is at the end like poison, is declared to be ‘passionate’.

133. That happiness which begins and results in self-delusion, and arises from sleep, indolence and heedlessness, is declared to be ‘dull’.

135. Prowess, boldness, fortitude, dexterity, also not flying from battle, generosity, and sovereignty—these are the natural qualifications of one born of a Sattvika-Rajasika nature (a Kshattriya by quality).

136. Agriculture, cattle-rearing and trade are the natural duties of one born of a Rajasika-Tamasika nature (a Vaisya by quality). Action consisting of menial service is the natural duty of one born of a Tamasika-Rajasika nature (a Sudra by quality).

Some by meditation behold the Self in their own intelligence, by the purified heart. Others realise It through the path of knowledge, and still others through the path of selfless activity dedicated to the Divine.

Some, again, not knowing these ways, worship the Divine as they have heard from others. Even these cross beyond death, regarding what they have heard as the supreme refuge.

Bhagavad Gita, XIII, 24, 25.

137. This Self, hidden in all beings, reveals Itself not to all. It is seen only by the subtle seers through the higher mind (Buddhi), refined and made one-pointed.

138. Having realised That which is without sound, without touch, formless, imperishable, and also without taste and smell, eternal, without beginning or end, and beyond all manifestation—one is liberated from the jaws of death.

139. When all the desires that dwell in the heart are destroyed, then the mortal becomes immortal and here itself attains the infinite Being.

140. When all the knots of the heart are rent asunder, the mortal becomes immortal—this is the end of all spiritual instruction.

141. Having taken the bow—the mighty weapon prescribed in the Upanishads—place on it the arrow (the self) rendered sharp by constant worship. Having drawn it with the mind absorbed in His thought, hit that mark—the imperishable, all-pervading Being.

Mundakopanishad, III, i, 5.

142. 'Om', the divine word, is the bow ; the soul indeed is the arrow ; and the eternal infinite Being is the target. Carefully that target is to be hit, and one has to become absorbed in Him just as the arrow becomes one with its target.

143. Know that one Self only, by whom the heaven, the earth and the sky, the mind and the vital powers are permeated. Give up all vain talks. This is the way to immortality.

144. In manifold ways He lives there within (the heart), where all the arteries meet like spokes in the nave. Meditate upon the indwelling Self as 'Om'. God-speed to you in your journey beyond the darkness of ignorance.

145. This resplendent and pure Self, whom the sinless souls realise as residing within their body, can be attained by truthfulness, concentration, true knowledge and unbroken continence.

146. This Self is not attained through discourses, nor through intellectuality, nor through much learning. It is gained only by him who longs for It with the whole heart. For to such a one the Self reveals Its own nature.

147. This Self cannot be attained by the weak, nor by the inattentive, nor even by austerity improperly practised. The wise one who strives through proper means merges in the infinite Self.

148. He who knows the bliss of that infinite Principle, whence all speech turns back with the mind, failing to reach It—he has no cause of fear.

149. All that is perceived is verily the one all-pervading Being. Calmly meditate on Him, from whom the universe has its origin, in whom it merges, and by whom it is sustained.

150. He alone is all that was and all that will be. Knowing Him, the Eternal, one transcends death ; there is no other way to freedom.

151. Seeing the Self in all beings and all beings in the Self, one attains the highest existence, and not by any other means.

152. As is oil in sesame seed, butter in curd, water in flowing streams and fire in wood, so is that Self to be discovered in oneself by a person who searches after It through truth and concentration.

153. Like butter hidden in milk, pure Consciousness resides in every being. That ought to be constantly churned out by the churning rod of the mind.

154. Yield not to weakness. It does not become thee. Cast off base weakness, and arise.

155. Children and not the wise speak of knowledge and performance of action as distinct. He who is truly established in one gains the fruit of both.

Bhagavad Gita, IX, 27.

156. The state which is gained by the followers of the path of knowledge is also reached by those who follow the path of selfless work. Who sees knowledge and performance of action as one, he truly sees.

157. A man should uplift himself by his higher self. So let him not weaken this self. For this self is the friend of oneself, and this self is also the enemy of oneself.

158. The self is the friend of him who has conquered the lower self by the higher. But to him whose lower self has not been conquered thus, the self behaves like a foe.

159. Those men of virtuous deeds whose sin has come to an end and who are freed from the delusion of conflicting emotions and sensations, worship Me with firm resolve.

160. Whatever thou doest, whatever thou eatest, whatever thou offerest in sacrifice, whatever thou givest away, whatever austerity thou practisest, do that as an offering unto Me, the Divine.

161. Even if the most sinful man worships Me, with devotion to none else, he should be regarded as good, for he has rightly resolved.

162. Soon does he become righteous and attain to eternal peace. Know it for certain—My devotee is never lost.

163. Having obtained this transient and joyless world, do thou worship Me.

164. Fill thy mind with Me ; be devoted to Me ; sacrifice unto Me ; bow down to Me. Thus making thy heart steadfast in me and taking Me as the supreme goal, thou shalt come to Me.

165. I am the origin of all ; from Me everything evolves. Thus thinking, the wise worship Me, engaged in contemplation.

166. With their minds wholly fixed in Me, with their life absorbed in Me, mutually enlightening and always speaking of Me, they are satisfied and delighted.

 अहं त्वा सर्वपापेभ्यो मोक्षयिष्यामि मा शुचः ॥१७१॥
 Bhagavad Gita, XVIII, 65, 66.

167. To them, ever steadfast and serving Me with affection, I give the right knowledge by which they come unto Me. Out of mere compassion for them, I, abiding in their hearts, destroy the darkness (in them) born of ignorance, by means of the lamp of wisdom.

168. By one-pointed devotion, I may be known in My universal form and seen in reality and also entered into.

169. He who does work for Me alone and has Me for his goal, who is devoted to Me and free from attachment and enmity to all beings—he realises Me.

170. Merge thy mind in Me ; be devoted to Me ; offer worship to Me ; bow down to Me. I assure thee—thou wilt then reach Me without fail, for thou art dear to Me.

171. Relinquishing the path of formal virtue and vice, take refuge in Me alone. Grieve not—I will absolve thee from all sins.

172. One thing is the good and quite different, indeed, is the pleasant. Serving different ends, these two bind the soul. It is well with him who follows the good, but he loses the goal, who chooses the pleasant.

173. Both the good and the pleasant are laid before man. The wise one discriminates between the two, having examined them well. The wise man prefers the good to the pleasant, but the man of little understanding chooses the pleasant through avarice and attachment.

174. Know the Self to be the master sitting in the chariot, and the body as the chariot. Consider the higher mind (Buddhi) as the charioteer, and the lower mind (Manas) as the rein.

175. The senses are the horses and the sense-objects are the roads. The wise call the Self the enjoyer when He is identified with the body, senses and mind.

176. One who is always of unrestrained mind and devoid of right understanding, his senses become uncontrollable like the wicked horses of a charioteer.

177. But he who is always of restrained mind and has right understanding, his senses are controlled like the good horses of a charioteer.

178. He who is devoid of proper understanding, who is thoughtless and always impure, never attains the goal, and gets into the round of births and deaths.

179. But he who is wise, who is ever pure and whose mind is controlled, reaches that goal whence none is born again.

180. The man who has wisdom for his charioteer and the mind as the well-controlled rein, reaches the end of the journey—the supreme state of the all-per-vading Self.

181. The self-existent Being has so made the senses that they go outward, and hence man sees the external world and not the inner Self. Perchance only some wise man desirous of immortality turns his eyes inwards and beholds the indwelling Self.

182. Ignorant souls pursue the external pleasures, and so they fall into the widespread snare of death. But the wise do not desire anything in this world, having known what is eternal in the midst of the transient.

183. Speak the truth. Follow the path of virtue. Swerve not from the study of the scriptures. Never swerve from truth. Never swerve from the path of virtue. Do not deviate from what is beneficial. Do not deviate from the path leading to your welfare. Also do not stray away from the study and teaching of the scriptures.

184. Let thy mother be a god to thee. Let thy father be a god to thee. Let thy teacher be a god to thee.

186. Subdue the senses, do acts of charity, be compassionate. Practise these three virtues—control of the senses, charity and compassion.

187. The stream of tendencies flowing through good and evil channels is to be directed by self-effort along the good path. When it has entered the evil path, it is to be turned towards the good path.

188. Sensations of heat and cold, of pain and pleasure, are born only of the contact of the senses with their objects. They have a beginning and an end. They are impermanent in their nature. Bear them patiently.

189. Man forms an attachment to objects when he broods over them. From attachment comes longing, and from longing anger grows.

190. From anger comes delusion, and from delusion loss of memory ; from loss of memory comes the ruin of discrimination, and from the ruin of discrimination man perishes.

192. Attachment and aversion of the senses for their respective objects are natural to man. Let none come under their sway, they are his foes.

193. It is desire, it is anger, born of the restlessness of the soul. It consumes and corrupts everything. Know it to be your foe in this world.

194. As fire is enveloped by smoke, as a mirror by dust, as an embryo by the womb, so is knowledge covered by desire.

195. This desire which is the constant enemy of the wise beclouds the knowledge of man. It is, verily, an insatiable fire.

196. The senses, the mind and the intellect are said to be its abode. Through these it deludes the embodied by veiling his wisdom.

197. Therefore, controlling the senses at the outset, kill desire—the source of all sins and the destroyer of knowledge and realisation.

198. The senses are said to be superior to the body, the lower mind (Manas) is superior to the senses, and the higher mind (Buddhi) is superior even to the lower mind. That which is superior to the higher mind is the Self.

199. Thus knowing Him who is superior to the higher mind and restraining the self by the Self, destroy that enemy (desire) who is hard to overcome.

200. Humility, unpretentiousness, non-injuriousness, forbearance, uprightness, service to the teacher, purity, steadiness, self-control ;

201. Renunciation of sense-objects, absence of egotism, reflection on the evils of birth, death, old age, sickness and pain ;

202. Non-attachment, absence of identification with son, wife, home and the rest, and constant steadiness of mind in both agreeable and disagreeable circumstances ;

203. Unswerving devotion to God through the practice of constant meditation, resort to sequestered places, distaste for the society of worldly men ;

204. Constant application to spiritual knowledge, a correct idea regarding the true end of wisdom—this is declared to be knowledge, and what is opposed to it is ignorance.

205. Fortitude, forgiveness, self-control, abstention from unlawful gain, purity of body and mind, sense-control, knowledge of scriptures, meditation on the supreme Being, truthfulness, freedom from anger—these constitute the tenfold path of virtue.

206. Let a man do that diligently, in doing which his heart feels real satisfaction, and let him avoid the opposite of it.

207. One should speak what is true and pleasant. He should neither speak an unpleasant truth nor a pleasant lie. This is the eternal path of virtue.

208. One should not insult those who are defective in limbs, who have redundant limbs, who are ignorant, who are aged, who are wanting in beauty or wealth, and also who are low in birth.

209. Let one avoid atheism, contempt of scriptures and divine forces, hatred, hypocrisy, pride, anger and severity.

210. Harmlessness, truthfulness, non-stealing, purity of body and mind, control of the sense-organs—this in brief is the path of virtue for everybody.

211. Reflecting in one's mind on the course that creatures follow due to virtue and vice, one should always set one's mind on virtue.

212. Non-injury, truthfulness, absence of anger, absence of cruelty, self-control, straightforwardness—these form the essentials of the path of virtue.

215. Truthfulness, compassion, austerity, cleanliness, purity, forbearance, right judgment, restraint of the organs, self-control, harmlessness, chastity, alms-giving, study of scriptures and straightforwardness; contentment, service of sages endowed with equanimity, gradual abstinence from worldly pursuits, reflection on the turns of fortune in the lives of men, silence, and self-examination; distribution of food among sentient beings according to their needs, and recognition of the spiritual nature and divinity of all creatures, especially men; listening to the praises of the Lord, glorifying and remembering Him, bowing before Him, regarding oneself as His servant, worshipping Him as a friend, dedicating oneself to Him—these are declared to be the thirty universal principles of virtue whereby the Lord, the Self of all, is pleased.

216. Men obtain the desired fruit by personal effort. While those wanting in manliness speak of destiny only.

217. Therefore should a man always make self-effort his duty in life; even if that effort should fail in this world, in another world its fruit is sure and certain.

218. Neither the lazy nor those who solely depend on destiny obtain their objects. Therefore, should one by all means persist in self-effort.

Yajnavalkya Smriti, I, 349-351.

219. Success of actions rests equally on destiny and one's efforts. Of these two, destiny is the expression of the efforts made in a previous life.

220. As a chariot cannot move on only one wheel, so without personal effort destiny does not succeed in accomplishing anything.

THE PATH OF SELFLESS ACTIVITY

कर्मण्येवाधिकारस्ते मा फलेषु कदाचन ।

Thy right is to work only, but never to the fruits thereof. So do not work with an eye to the fruits of thy actions, nor be thou prone to inaction.

Bhagavad Gita, II, 47.

Bhagavad Gita, III, 19.

221. Viewing alike pleasure and pain, gain and loss, victory and defeat, engage thyself in battle. Thou wilt thus incur no sin.

222. In this spiritual path no effort, even though incomplete, is ever wasted, nor is it attended with sins of omission as in the path of rituals. Even a little practice of it protects one from the great terror of birth and death.

223. Work with mental poise, being free from all attachment, and remaining unconcerned with regard to success and failure. This evenness of mind is known as Yoga.

224. The world is bound by actions other than those performed for the sake of worship. Do thou, therefore, perform actions as worship alone, devoid of attachment.

225. Do thou, therefore, perform thy duties without attachment. By performing actions without attachment, a person attains to the Highest.

226. Actions are wrought all around by the forces of Nature. But with the understanding deluded by egotism, man thinks, "I am the agent."

227. A true seer who knows the distinction of the Self from Nature's forces and their works, does not identify himself with them, perceiving, "It is not I but the senses that act on sense-objects."

228. Surrendering all actions to the Divine, fixing the thoughts on the immanent Self, and abandoning all longings and selfishness, fight without fear and excitement.

229. Work performed as worship is no work at all, for it fails to bind. But inactivity in the matter of duty is really work, for it causes bondage. He who thus sees inaction in action, and action in inaction, he is intelligent among men, he is a Yogi and a doer of all actions.

231. Forsaking the clinging to fruits of actions, ever satisfied, and depending on none for one's worldly welfare, he does not really do anything, even though engaged in action.

232. Free from longings, having control over the body and mind, and possessing nothing as his own, he does not suffer any evil consequence by doing mere bodily action.

233. Content with what comes unsought, unaffected by pleasure and pain, free from envy, even-minded in success and failure, he is not bound even while acting.

234. Devoid of attachment, liberated, with mind centred in knowledge, and performing work as worship, all his actions melt away leaving no trace behind.

235. For him the instruments of sacrifice, the oblation, the sacrificial fire and the sacrificer are all manifestations of the Divine. By fixing the mind thus on the Divine manifest in actions, he reaches Him alone.

236. The well-poised, forsaking the fruit of action, attain the peace born of steadfastness in devotion ; the unbalanced on the other hand, impelled by desire, are bound by attachment to the fruit of action.

237. Whatever thou doest, whatever thou eatest, whatever thou offerest in sacrifice, whatever thou givest away in charity, whatever thou practisest as austerity, do that as an offering unto Me.

238. Thus shalt thou be freed from the bondage of actions, bearing good and evil results. With the heart steadfast in the Yoga of renunciation and being liberated, thou shalt come unto Me.

239. Actions cannot be entirely relinquished by an embodied being, but he who relinquishes the fruits of action is called a man of true renunciation.

240. The threefold fruit of action—disagreeable, agreeable and mixed—accrues to the non-relinquisher, but never to the man who has renounced.

241. Devoted to his own duty, man attains the highest perfection. How, engaged in his own duty, he attains perfection, that do thou hear.

242. From whom proceeds the evolution of all beings, by whom everything is pervaded—worshipping Him with his own duty, a man attains perfection.

243. Better one's own duty (Dharma) though imperfect, than the duty of another well-performed. He who does the duty dictated by his own nature incurs no stain.

244. One should not relinquish the duty to which one is born, though it be attended with evil; for all undertakings are enveloped by evil as fire by smoke.

245. Even though doing all actions always, My devotee who takes refuge in Me gains the eternal and immutable state through My grace.

246. Resigning mentally all deeds in Me, having Me as the highest goal, and resorting to the devotion of right knowledge, do thou ever fix thy mind on Me.

VIII

THE PATH OF DEVOTION

ये यथा मां प्रपद्यन्ते तांस्तथैव भजाम्यहम् ।
मम वर्त्मानुवर्तन्ते मनुष्याः पार्थ ! सर्वशः ॥

In whatever way men worship Me, the Divine, in the same way do I fulfil their desires. It is My path that men tread on all sides.

Bhagavad Gita, IV, 11.

यो यो यां यां तनुं भक्तः श्रद्धयार्चितुमिच्छति ।

 Bhagavad Gita, VII, 21.

247. Whatever Divine form a devotee seeks to worship with faith, that faith of his do I make unwavering.

248. Whoever offers Me with devotion a leaf, a flower, a fruit or some water—that gift of love, made by the pure-minded, I accept.

249. Those who worship Me, resigning all actions to Me, regarding Me as the supreme goal, and meditating on Me with single-minded Yoga,—to those whose minds are thus set on Me, I verily become the saviour ere long in this ocean of mortal existence.

250. Let thy mind be fixed only on Me, let thy intellect abide in Me; thou shalt no doubt live in Me hereafter.

251. If thou art not able to fix thy mind steadily on Me, then by repeated practice of concentration do thou try to reach Me.

252. If thou art not able to practise this concentration, be thou intent on doing actions for My sake. Even by doing actions for My sake, thou shalt attain perfection.

253. If thou art not capable of doing even this, then abandoning the fruits of action, take refuge in Me with thy mind subdued.

254. The Lord dwells in the hearts of all beings, causing them to revolve by His divine power (Maya), as if they were mounted on a machine.

255. Take refuge in Him with all thy heart; by His grace shalt thou attain supreme peace and the eternal abode.

✓ 256. He who hates no creature and is friendly and compassionate towards all, who is free from the feelings of "I" and "Mine" and remains even-minded in pain and pleasure; who is forbearing, ever content and steady in meditation; who is self-controlled, possessed of firm conviction and has his mind and intellect fixed on Me (the Divine)—he who is thus devoted to Me, is dear to Me.

257. He by whom the world is not distressed and who cannot be distressed by the world, who is free from joy and envy, fear and anxiety—he is dear to Me (the Divine).

258. He who is free from dependence, who is pure, prompt, unconcerned and untroubled, who has renounced every undertaking—he who is thus devoted to Me, is dear to Me.

259. The devotee who neither rejoices nor hates, neither grieves nor desires, who renounces all relative good and evil—he is dear to Me.

260. He who is the same to friend and foe; who is alike in honour and dishonour, in heat and cold, in pleasure and pain; who is free from attachment; to whom censure and praise are equal; who is silent, content with anything, homeless, steady-minded and full of devotion—that man is dear to Me.

THE PATH OF KNOWLEDGE

ज्ञानं लब्ध्वा परां शान्तिमचिरेणाधिगच्छति ॥

The man of faith who is devoted to spiritual knowledge and practice of self-control gains wisdom. Having obtained wisdom, he gains supreme peace at once.

Bhagavad Gita, IV, 39.

261. Knowledge as sacrifice is superior to sacrifice performed with material objects. All action in its entirety attains its consummation in knowledge.

262. Even if thou art the most sinful among evil-doers, yet by the raft of knowledge alone shalt thou go across all sin.

263. As a blazing fire reduces fuel into ashes, so does the fire of knowledge reduce all deeds (Karma) to ashes.

264. Verily, there exists nothing in this world so thoroughly purifying as knowledge. In good time, having reached perfection in Yoga, one realises it oneself in one's own heart.

265. He who has renounced all deeds by surrendering them to the Divine, whose doubts have been rent asunder by knowledge, and who is established in the Self—he is not bound by actions.

266. Cut asunder, with the sword of knowledge, this doubt about the Self that ignorance has caused in your heart, and stand up, taking refuge in Yoga.

267. Freed from attachment, fear and anger, absorbed in the Divine, taking refuge in Him, and purified by the fire of knowledge, many have attained the all-pervading Being.

268. With the mind purified by devotion to performance of action, with the body conquered, and with the senses subdued, one who has realised his self as the Self of all beings remains free from taints even while acting.

269. The knower of truth, being centred in the Self, should think, "I do nothing at all," though seeing, hearing, touching, smelling, eating, moving, breathing, sleeping, speaking, emitting, holding, and opening and closing the eyes—convinced that it is the senses that move among sense-objects.

270. He who does actions, forsaking attachment and resigning them to the all-pervading Self, is not soiled by evil, even as a lotus leaf is not by water drops.

271. Yogins following the path of selfless work, perform action only with the body, mind, senses and intellect, forsaking attachment, for the purification of the heart.

272. In persons whose ignorance is destroyed by the knowledge of the Self, that knowledge of theirs, like the sun, reveals the supreme Being.

273. Those who have their intellect absorbed in That, whose self is That, whose steadfastness is That, whose consummation is That—they attain to the highest salvation, their impurities being cleansed by knowledge.

274. The knowers of the self look with an equal eye on the man of the highest caste endowed with learning and humility, as on a cow, an elephant, a dog, and an out-caste.

275. Since the infinite Self is even and without imperfection, relative existence has been conquered, here in this very world, by those whose minds rest in evenness; therefore they rest indeed in Him.

276. Residing in the infinite Self, with the intellect steady and without delusion, the knower of the Self neither rejoices on receiving what is pleasant, nor grieves on receiving what is unpleasant.

277. With the heart unattached to external objects, he realises the joy that is in the Self, and being devoted to meditation on the Infinite, he attains undecaying happiness.

278. Since enjoyments that are born of the contact of the senses and their objects are with beginning and end, and are parents of misery alone, a wise man does not seek pleasure in them.

279. He who can withstand in this world, even before he gives up the body, the impulse arising from lust and anger, he is steadfast in Yoga, he is a happy man.

280. Whose happiness is within, whose relaxation is within, whose light is within—that Yogi alone becomes the Infinite and gains absolute freedom.

281. Free from imperfections and doubts, with senses controlled and engaged in the good of all beings, sages attain absolute freedom.

282. Of all virtuous men, the most excellent are the wise who are ever steadfast and endowed with devotion to the One, for exceedingly dear am I to the wise, and they are dear to Me.

283. Noble, indeed, are all who worship Me, but the wise man I regard as My very Self, for with his mind steadfast, he is established in Me alone as the supreme goal.

284. Those who worship the imperishable, the indefinable, the unmanifested, the omnipresent, the unthinkable, the unchangeable, the immovable, the eternal, having subdued all the senses, even-minded under all circumstances and engaged in the welfare of all beings—they, verily, reach Me.

THE PATH OF CONCENTRATION AND MEDITATION

योगी युञ्जीत सततमात्मानं रहसि स्थितः ।
एकाकी यतचित्तात्मा निराशीरपरिग्रहः ॥

The Yogi should constantly practise concentration, retiring into solitude. Let him be absolutely alone, without possessions and longings, and controlled in body and mind.

Bhagavad Gita, VI, 10.

युक्ताहारविहारस्य युक्तचेष्टस्य योगिनः ।

युक्तस्वप्नावबोधस्य योगो भवति दुःखहा ॥ २८९ ॥

285. Taking his place on an appropriate seat, making the mind one-pointed, and subduing the functions of the imaging faculty and the senses, let him practise Yoga for the purification of the heart.

286. With the heart serene and fearless, firm in the vow of chastity, with the mind controlled and ever thinking of Me, let him sit in Yoga, having the Divine as his supreme goal.

287. Always keeping the mind steadfast, the Yogi of subdued mind attains the peace which resides in Me and culminates in emancipation.

288. Success in Yoga is not for him who eats too much or too little. It is not for him who sleeps too long or too little.

289. To him who is temperate in eating and recreation, in his effort for work and in his sleep and wakefulness, Yoga becomes the destroyer of misery.

290. When the mind is completely controlled and rests serene in the Self alone, free from all longing for objects of desires, then is one called steadfast in Yoga.

291. As a lamp in a spot sheltered from the wind does not flicker, even such has been the simile used for a Yogi of subdued mind, practising concentration on the Self.

292. When the mind, absolutely restrained by the practice of concentration, attains quietude, and when one rejoices in the Divine, perceiving Him in oneself through the mind; when one feels that infinite bliss—the bliss which is experienced by the higher mind but never by the senses, in which established one never departs from Truth, obtaining which one regards no other acquisition superior, centred in which one is not moved even by heavy sorrow,—let that be known as the state called Yoga. It is a state of severance from contact with pain. This Yoga should be practised with perseverance, undisturbed by the depression of heart.

293. Abandoning without reserve all desires born of wilful volition, and completely restraining, by the mind alone, the group of senses from their objects in all directions ;

294. With the higher mind (Buddhi) drawn in by concentration and with thought (Manas) fastened on the Self, let him attain quietude by degrees. Let him not think of anything else.

295. Through whatever reason the restless, unsteady mind wanders away, let him, curbing it from that, bring it under the sway of the Self alone.

296. Verily, supreme bliss comes to that Yogi who is perfectly tranquil, whose passions are quieted, who is sinless, and who has become one with the all-pervading Being.

297. The Yogi, freed from the taint of relative good and evil, and constantly engaging the mind thus, attains with ease the infinite bliss of communion with the supreme Self.

Bhagavad Gita, VI, 24-28, 30-32.

298. He who sees Me in all and all things in Me, he never becomes separated from Me, nor do I become separated from him.

299. He who worships Me dwelling in all beings and is established in Unity—that Yogi abides in Me, whatever be his mode of life.

300. He who judges the pleasure and pain of all by the same standard as he applies to himself, is regarded as the highest among Yogis.

GENERAL MEDITATIONS ON THE DIVINE

The eternal Being dwells in the hearts of all. He is the lord of the past and the future. By realising Him, one is free from fear. This verily is the Truth.

His form is not within the field of vision. None can perceive Him with the eyes and the other senses. He is revealed by the intuition of the higher mind which resides in the heart and controls all thinking. Those who know Him become immortal.

301. He is our father, progenitor and director. He is cognisant of all places, all worlds.

302. He is the all-pervading Being manifesting himself as all things. He has innumerable heads, eyes and feet. It is He that has encompassed the whole universe, and it is He again who transcends it.

303. That Being is this whole cosmos, all that was and all that will be. He manifests Himself in the form of the universe. He is also the lord and giver of immortality.

304. So vast is His glory; but He, the universal Being, is greater than all that. The manifested world forms but a small portion of His being; in main He remains unmanifest and immortal.

305. He, the cosmic Being, is the supreme principle of existence, the supreme truth, the supreme light and the supreme self.

306. He permeates within and without all that exists—all that is in the universe, seen or heard.

307. The infinite, the immutable, the omniscient, the self, the end of creation, the origin of all that is good—He shines in the hearts of all beings.

308. The all-pervading Reality, though one, is regarded as many. He is the Self of all beings. He is the innermost Self of all that exists. He is seated in the hearts of all. He is the ruler of all. All beings become one in Him.

309. He is the all-pervading, the self-resplendent, the formless, the scatheless, the muscleless, the pure, the one unaffected by ignorance, the seer, the omniscient, the transcendent, and the uncreate.

310. The Self is that by whose power the ear hears, the eye sees, the tongue speaks, the mind understands, and life functions.

311. What speech cannot reveal, but what reveals speech,—know that alone as Brahman (the Infinite) and not this that people worship here.

318. As the sun, which forms the eye of the universe, is never defiled by the external impurities seen by the eyes, so the one Self that resides in all beings is never touched by the evils of the world.

319. That which is unperceivable, ungraspable, unborn, colourless, without eyes and ears and hands and feet; that which is eternal yet of manifold expressions, all-pervading, extremely subtle and undecaying,—the wise behold It, the source of all creation, everywhere.

320. That effulgent Being is verily formless, existing both within and without, uncreate, without breath and mind, pure and transcendent.

321. This Self, who is omniscient and all-knowing, and whose glory is manifest in the universe, dwells in the body—the abode of the Divine. He is of the nature of pure consciousness manifesting through the mind ; He is the controller of the vital energy and the body. He dwells in the body, being seated in the heart. By knowing Him, the wise realise that which is bliss and immortality.

322. In the supreme effulgent sheath of Intelligence dwells the infinite Being—stainless, transcendent, pure. Light of all lights, it is That whom the knowers of the Self realise.

323. There the sun shines not, nor the moon, nor the stars, nor lightning, much less fire. He shining, everything shines after Him. By His light is everything lighted.

324. The supreme Being who is infinite, eternal and immortal is in front, is behind, is on the left and the right, is above and below. This universe is, verily, He.

342. He is the Self free from all sins, free from old age, free from death and misery, free from hunger and thirst. His desire and His will are always effective and blemishless.

343. Handless He seizes and feetless He hastens, eyeless He sees and earless He hears. He knows all that is to be known, but there is none that knows Him. Men call Him the great primeval Being.

344. In the world there is none who is His master or ruler. He is the Absolute, He is the cause of all—the ruler even of the cosmic powers lying at the back of the senses. There is no one who is his progenitor or controller.

345. He is neither feminine, nor masculine, nor neuter. He appears to be identified with the body he takes.

349. Neither the sense of agency nor actions does the Lord create for man. Nor does He bring about the union of actions with their fruits. It is Nature that does it all.

352. The ignorant regard Me as the unmanifested come into manifestation. They do not know My supreme state which is immutable and transcendent.

353. Verily, through the illusion born of ignorance I am not manifest to all. This deluded world knows Me not, the unborn and immutable.

354. I know all the beings of the past, present and future, but none knows Me.

358. I am the Self existent in the hearts of all beings. I am the beginning, the middle and also the end of all beings.

359. Whatsoever is the seed of all beings, that also am I. There is nothing, whether moving or unmoving, that can exist without Me.

360. Whatever there is great, prosperous or powerful, know that to be a product of a part of My splendour.

361. Know thou this fact, that I exist supporting this whole universe by a portion of Myself.

362. I am the abode of the Infinite, the Immortal and the Immutable, of everlasting righteousness and of absolute bliss.

MONISTIC MEDITATIONS

The Absolute (Turiya), they say, is not inwardly cognitive, nor outwardly cognitive, nor cognitive both-wise. Neither is it an indefinite mass of cognition, nor collective cognition, nor non-cognition. It is unseen, unrelated, inconceivable, uninferable, unimaginable, indescribable. It is the essence of the self-cognition common to all states of consciousness. All phenomena cease in It. It is peace, It is bliss, It is non-duality.

I am the divine Being ; I am none but He. I am the all-pervading Self free from grief. I am existence-knowledge-bliss Absolute, eternally free by nature.

That which manifests the phenomena, including the states of waking, dream the deep sleep—realising that Infinite (Brahman), to be one's own real Self, one is liberated from all bonds.

364. Taking hold of knowledge, one should bring out the supreme Self, just as fire is produced by friction. I am that indivisible, immutable, tranquil Self.

365. In whom reside all beings, and who resides in all beings as their supporter—that all-pervading Deity I am, that all-pervading Deity I am.

366. As different from all that constitute the subject, object and their union in the three states of waking, dream and deep sleep, I am the witness, the pure intelligence, the eternal good.

367. In me, the Infinite, is everything born; in me, the Infinite, does everything rest; and to me, the Infinite, does everything return after destruction. I am that eternal, all-pervading Being, the one without a second.

369. I am without arms and legs, I am of inconceivable power. I see without eyes, and hear without ears. I know all and am different from all. I am always the absolute intelligence.

370. I alone am taught in the various scriptures. I am the knower of the scriptures. I am the revealer of the highest spiritual knowledge. For me there is neither merit nor demerit. I suffer no destruction. I have no birth, nor any false identity with the body or with the organs of sense.

380. I am of the nature of the supreme Self. I am the supreme bliss. I am the embodiment of pure knowledge. I am the supreme Being.

399. I meditate within my heart on the self-effulgent Being, the existence-knowledge-bliss Absolute, the goal of the highest spiritual striving, the transcendent and the eternal who is beyond the states of waking, dream and deep sleep. I am, verily, that indivisible Self, not a combination of elements.

400. I am neither the body nor the senses, neither the mind nor the ego, neither the vital forces nor the intellect. I am beyond all ideas of sex, son, land and wealth. I am the witness—the eternal, blissful indwelling Self. I am that infinite Being Himself.

401. A rope, through ignorance, appears to be a snake; even so, through the ignorance of the Self, there arises the individualised condition of the Self. When told by a person in whom one has faith, the illusion disappears, and one sees the rope; even so, through the words of the preceptor, I realise that I am not the individualised soul but the infinite Being Himself.

402. In the Self that is truth, knowledge and bliss Absolute, this world shines falsely owing to ignorance. It is not true even as dreams under the delusive influence of sleep. The pure, infinite, blissful, eternal Being without a second am I.

403. There exists nothing but the Self, my true nature. The outer world is in reality a product of ignorance and shines in me who am the One without a second, even as images shine in a mirror. Therefore I, verily, am the infinite Being Himself.

404. I am neither born, nor do I grow, nor die. All the qualities born of Nature pertain to the body. The sense of agency and the like are of the ego only, not of the Self which is pure intelligence. I am the infinite Being Himself.

406. I am neither mind nor intellect, neither memory nor ego. I am not the senses of hearing or taste, smell or sight. I am neither ether, nor earth, nor fire, nor air. I am knowledge and bliss absolute. I am the Self all-pervading, I am the Self all-pervading.

407. I am not that which is called vital energy, nor the different components of the body. I am not the different limiting adjuncts that like sheaths cover the soul, nor am I the organs of action. I am the all-pervading Self, I am the all-pervading Self.

411. I am the Self, changeless and formless, all-pervading and omnipresent. I am beyond the touch of sense-attachment. I am beyond all bondage and relative knowledge. I am the all-pervading Self, I am the all-pervading Self.

412. I am neither earth nor water, neither fire nor air, neither ether nor the organs of sense, nor even the combination of all these. For they are all transient. I am the ultimate Truth, whose existence is proved by deep sleep—I am the all-pervading Self, the One without a second.

413. I am beyond caste and the rules of caste, society and custom. I am the self-existent Reality, beyond concentration, meditation and other practices of Yoga. All illusion of 'I' and 'mine' is rooted in the not-self, and is dispelled by knowledge of the Self. I am the ultimate Truth, the all-pervading Self, the One without a second.

414. For me there is neither mother nor father, neither the gods nor the worlds, neither scriptures nor sacrifices nor holy places. For I am the Self who remains in the utter void that negates everything else in deep sleep. I am the ultimate Truth, the all-pervading Self, the One without a second.

415. Doctrines and creeds, rituals and dogmas, I do not need any more. Through the direct knowledge of the highest kind I have attained identity with the Self that is of unsullied nature. I am the ultimate Truth, the all-pervading Self, the One without a second.

416. There is neither above nor below, neither inside nor outside, neither middle nor across, neither before nor behind. I am indivisible by nature and all-pervading like space. I am the ultimate Truth, the all-pervading Self, the One without a second.

417. I am neither white nor black, neither red nor yellow, neither bent nor stout, neither short nor lean. I am formless, of the nature of self-resplendent consciousness. I am the ultimate Truth, the all-pervading Self, the One without a second.

418. To Me, the Self, there is neither teacher nor scriptures, neither pupil nor teaching, neither object nor subject. To Me, the Self, this whole empirical universe does not exist. I am the absolute Consciousness, the Reality that does not admit of differentiation. I am the ultimate Truth, the all-pervading Self, the One without a second.

419. To Me, the Self, there is neither waking, nor dream, nor deep sleep. I am not conditioned by these three states; for these are of the nature of nescience, and I am the transcendental existence, beyond these three. I am the ultimate Truth, the all-pervading Self, the One without a second.

420. All this universe, being other than the Self, is unreal; the Self alone is all-pervading. It constitutes the Reality, and is self-existent and independent of everything. I am the ultimate Truth, the all-pervading Self, the One without a second.

421. It cannot even be said that It is one. For how can there be a second other than That? There is neither absoluteness nor non-absoluteness, neither non-entity, nor entity; for the Reality is absolutely non-dual. How then can I describe That, which is the goal of the highest knowledge?

422. That which is realised by the mind purified by penance, worship, charity and other means, after renouncing everything up to the position of a monarch as worthless—that eternal, infinite, supreme Being I am.

424. That which is of the nature of absolute bliss and consciousness; which is beyond the phenomenal universe and free from all limitations; which is attained only by meditating, 'I am the absolute Being, the highest state of existence'—that eternal, infinite, supreme Being I am.

425. That Absolute, through ignorance of which there appears the diversified universe, and at the appearance of whose knowledge it is destroyed in no time, which is pure, free, beyond speech and thought—that eternal, infinite, supreme Being I am.

427. That through a particle of whose bliss the whole world becomes blissful, that which existing everything else exists, that through the vision of which everything else is seen—that eternal, infinite, supreme Being I am.

428. That which is infinite, all-pervading, the cause of all, beyond all desires, beneficent, without attachment, realisable through Its symbol ‘Om’, formless, most effulgent and deathless—that eternal, infinite, supreme Being I am.

430. I am verily the supreme light, the blissful Self, which is neither masculine nor feminine nor neuter. I am neither a child nor a youth, neither an old man nor one of high caste, neither a student nor a householder, neither an anchorite nor a monk. I am the all-pervading Self, the one cause of the origin and dissolution of the world.

THE WAYS OF THE IDEAL MAN¹

He who knows the Self as such becomes self-controlled, calm, withdrawn into himself, enduring and concentrated, and sees the Self in his own body; he sees all as the Self. Evil does not overtake him, but he transcends all evil. Evil does not trouble him, but he consumes all evil. He becomes sinless, taintless free from doubts and a knower of Brahman (the Infinite).

431. The wise one, who perceives all things as existent in the Self and the Self as existent in all things, hates none.

432. When to the seer all things appear as nothing but the Self, then what delusion, what sorrow can come to that sage who beholds the Oneness?

433. The wise man relinquishes both pain and pleasure, having realised, by means of meditation on the inner Self, the ancient effulgent one, hard to be seen, subtle, immanent, seated in the heart, and residing within the body.

434. The wise one does not grieve, having known the bodiless, all-pervading, supreme Self that dwells in the impermanent body.

435. The infinite Being is, verily, the All—work, austerity, the highest, the immortal and the supreme Self. He who knows It as seated in the cavity of the heart certainly cuts asunder the knot of ignorance even while living.

436. The knots of the heart break asunder, all doubts disappear, and the impressions of accumulated deeds vanish, when a person realises Him who is manifest as everything, whether high or low.

437. When the seer realises that effulgent supreme Being—the creator, the lord and source of cosmic existence—then that wise one, having shaken off all sin and merit, attains to the supreme, stainless Unity.

438. He is the principle of life that pervades all beings. Knowing Him, the wise one does not become a vain babbling; he revels in the Self, remains satisfied with the Self, becomes endowed with all the virtues of spiritual life. Verily, he is the foremost of all the knowers of the Infinite.

439. The man of self-realisation knows that supreme, effulgent, all-pervading Being, the basis of all, resting in whom the whole universe shines brightly. Worshipping Him, the wise free themselves from all desires and transcend this birth and death.

440. The knower of the infinite Self attains the highest. That is what is said in the following hymn : Brahman—the all-pervading Principle—is reality, absolute knowledge and infinitude. He who knows that infinite Existence, hidden in the hearts of all beings, realises all his desires.

441. He who is without desires, who is free from desires, the objects of whose desires have been attained, and to whom all objects of desire are but Self—he is free from birth and death, and having realised the infinite Self, becomes merged in It.

442. The wise man is not depressed by adversity, just like the golden lotus that fades not at the approach of night. He does not set his heart on anything beyond his immediate concern, and his delight lies in the path of the virtuous. As alum clarifies water, so the nature of one who is enlightened becomes purified. Free from doubts, wickedness, inquisitiveness and delusion, his mind is perfectly integrated, and he shines like the full moon.

443. That calm man who is the same in pain and pleasure, whom these cannot disturb—he alone is able to attain to immortality.

444. The unreal never is. The Real never is not. Men possessed of the knowledge of Truth fully know both these.

445. To Him who has known the Self, all the scriptures are of so much use as a reservoir is when there is flood everywhere.

446. When a man completely casts away all the desires of the mind and is satisfied in the Self alone by the Self, then is he said to be of steady wisdom.

447. He whose mind is not shaken by adversity, who does not hanker after prosperity, who has become free from attachment, fear and wrath—he, indeed, is a sage of steady wisdom.

448. He who is everywhere unattached, not pleased at good, nor vexed at evil—his wisdom is fixed.

449. When, like the tortoise withdrawing its limbs, he can completely withdraw the senses from their objects, then his wisdom becomes steady.

450. Objects of desire fall away from the abstinent man, leaving behind the taste for them. But the taste also ceases when he realises the Supreme.

451. The turbulent senses do violently carry away the mind of even the wise man striving after perfection.

452. The steadfast, having controlled them all, would sit focussing the mind on the Supreme. His wisdom is steady, whose senses are under control.

453. The mind which follows in the wake of the wandering senses carries away man's discrimination, as the wind a boat on the waters.

454. Therefore, his knowledge is steady, whose senses are completely restrained from their objects.

455. As into the ocean, brimful and still, flow the waters, even so into the perfected man enter all desires; it is he, and not one who clings to desires, that attains peace.

456. The man who lives devoid of longing, abandoning all desires, and who is without the sense of 'I' and 'mine', attains peace.

457. As the unwise act out of attachment to work, so should the wise act without attachment, desirous of guiding the world.

458. When there is no attachment either to sense-objects or to actions, then, having renounced all thought of these, one is said to have attained the ideal of Yoga.

459. To the self-controlled and serene, the supreme Self is the object of constant realisation, in cold and heat, in pleasure and pain, in honour and dishonour.

460. Whose heart is filled with satisfaction by wisdom and realisation, who is firm and steady, whose senses are conquered, and to whom a lump of earth, stone and gold are the same—that Yogi is said to be steadfast.

461. He attains excellence who looks with equal regard upon well-wishers, friends, foes, neutrals and arbiters, upon the hateful, the relatives, the righteous and the unrighteous alike.

462. I (the divine Being) am easily attainable by that ever-steadfast Yogi who remembers Me constantly and with singleness of mind, and who does actions in the spirit of Yoga.

463. Reaching the highest perfection, and having attained Me, the great-souled ones are no more subject to rebirth, the ephemeral home of pain.

464. The great-souled ones, possessed of divine nature, and knowing Me—the all-pervading Being—to be immutable and the origin of creatures, worship Me with a single mind.

465. Glorifying Me always, striving with firm resolve, bowing down to Me in devotion, and always steadfast, they worship Me.

466. To persons who, meditating on Me (the Divine) as non-separate, worship Me in all beings,—to those thus steadfast wholly and constantly, I carry what they lack and preserve what they already have.

468. He who, sitting like one unconcerned, is not moved by the forces of Nature (Gunas), who, knowing that these forces operate, is Self-centred and swerves not ;

469. He who is alike in pleasure and pain and is Self-abiding, who regards a clod of earth, a stone and gold alike, who is the same in pleasant and unpleasant circumstances, who, being firm, regards alike both censure and praise ;

470. He who is the same in honour and disgrace, the same to friend and foe, who has relinquished all undertakings (born of selfish desires and ambitions)—he is said to have gone beyond the forces of Nature (Gunas).

472. He who is free from delusion knows Me as the supreme Being. Knowing all, he worships Me as the All-Being.

473. He whose intellect is not attached anywhere, who has subdued his heart, whose desires have fled—he attains to supreme perfection, consisting of freedom from action, by renunciation.

474. Endowed with a pure intellect, subduing the body and the senses with fortitude, relinquishing sound and such other sense-objects as much as possible, abandoning attraction and hatred ;

475. Resorting to a sequestered spot, eating but little, controlling the body, speech and mind, ever engaged in meditation and concentration, possessed of dispassion ;

476. Forsaking egotism, power, pride, lust, .wrath and property, freed from the notion of ' I ' and ' mine ', and tranquil—he makes himself fit for becoming one with the Divine.

477. Having become one with the Divine and tranquil-minded, he neither grieves nor desires. The same to all beings, he attains supreme devotion to Me.

478. By devotion he knows Me in reality, what and who I am ; then having known Me in reality, he forthwith enters into Me.

479. That one supreme Ruler, the Self of all beings, who makes His form manifold—those wise ones who perceive Him as existing in their own soul, to them belongs eternal happiness, and to none else.

480. He, the eternal among non-eternals, the intelligence of the intelligent, who, though one, fulfils the desires of many—those wise ones who perceive Him as existing within their own soul, to them belongs eternal peace, and to none else.

481. Having attained the Self, the sages gain satisfaction through knowledge. They become Self-realised, tranquil and free from all desires. Those Self-centred wise ones having realised the All-pervading in all, enter, into all.

482. All these men of renunciation, who are well-established in the knowledge of the Self, whose soul is purified through the practice of renunciation, who attain the supreme immortality, gain final emancipation by being merged in the Absolute after death.

483. As the flowing rivers, having relinquished their names and forms, merge into the ocean, so the wise, being free from name and form, attain the supreme divine Being.

484. The Self alone is below, the Self is above, the Self is behind, the Self is before, the Self is to the right, the Self is to the left, the Self is all that exists. One who sees thus, thinks thus, and understands thus loves the Self, revels in the Self, enjoys the presence of the Self, and rejoices in the Self. He attains perfect freedom.

485. The Yogi who strives assiduously, being purified of taint and gradually gaining perfection through many births, reaches the highest goal.

486. At all times, constantly remember Me, the Divine, and fight. With mind and intellect absorbed in Me, thou shalt doubtless attain Me.

487. Always dwelling on His thought, with a mind moving towards nothing else and rendered steadfast by habitual meditation—one goes to Him, the supreme, resplendent Being.

488. What the knowers of the scriptures speak of as the Imperishable ; what the self-controlled who are free from attachment enter ; to gain which goal they live the life of a religious student, taking up the vow of absolute chastity—that I shall declare unto thee in brief.

489. Controlling all senses ; confining the mind in the heart ; drawing into the head, the vital energy manifesting itself as breath ; occupied in the practice of concentration ; uttering the one syllable ‘ OM ’, the symbol of the all-pervading Self ; and meditating on Me, the divine Being,—he who departs thus, attains the supreme goal on leaving the body.

490. I, the Divine, is easily attainable by the ever-steadfast Yogin who remembers Me constantly with a single mind.

491. Having attained Me, the great-souled ones reach the highest perfection, and are no more subject to rebirth—the ephemeral home of pain.

492. What is called the Unmanifested and the Imperishable, has been described as the goal supreme. That is My highest state, having attained which there is no return.

493. And that supreme Being, in whom all things dwell, by whom all this is pervaded, is attainable by whole-hearted devotion to Him alone.

494. He who knows Me, the Supreme, to be birthless and beginningless, to be the great lord of the worlds—he among mortals is undeluded, he is free from all sins.

495. He sees, who sees the supreme Lord existing equally in all beings, deathless in the dying.

ओं तत् सत् ।

496. As he sees the Lord equally existent everywhere, he does not injure the Self by the self, and so goes to the highest goal.

497. And he truly sees, who sees that Nature alone does all actions, and that the Self is actionless.

498. When he sees the separate existence of all beings inherent in the One and their expansion from that One alone, he then becomes Brahman—the infinite and the absolute.

499. Verily, he becomes Brahman, who knows Brahman. He crosses all sins and transcends all grief. Being free from all knots of the heart, he attains immortality.

Salutations to the great Seers of Truth !
Salutations to the great Seers of Truth !

Om. The Absolute alone is the Reality.

ॐ पूर्णमदः पूर्णमिदम् पूर्णात् पूर्णमुदच्यते ।
पूर्णस्य पूर्णमादाय पूर्णमेवावशिष्यते ॥

ॐ शान्तिः शान्तिः शान्तिः

That which is Brahman—the all-pervading Self in all—is infinite. And This which appears as the universe, but is all-pervading in Its real nature, is infinite. This differentiated Brahman emanates from the undifferentiated Brahman, but does not give up Its real nature. Rising above all limiting adjuncts, that which appears as the conditioned ever remains the unconditioned infinite Brahman.

OM PEACE ! PEACE ! PEACE !
